CAP. I.

The Site and speciall parts of Ireland.

IRELAND lieth a-loofe in the West Ocean, and is deemed by the later Survey, to be in length well-nigh three hundred miles north & south: broad from East to West one hundred and twentie. In proportion it resembleth an egge, blunt and plaine on the sides, not reaching forth to Sea, in nookes and elbowes of Land, as Brittaine doth.

Long since, it was devided into foure regions, Leinster East, Connaght West, Ulster North, Mounster South, and into a fift plot defalked from every fourth part, lyng together in the heart of the Realme, called thereof Media, Meath.

Each of these five (where they are framable to civility, and answere the writts of the Crowne,) be sundred into shires and counties, after this manner.

In Leinster lye the counties of Dublin, Kildare, Wexford, Caterlagh, Kilkenny, King & Queenes counties, these two lately so named by Parliament in the raignes of Philip and Mary, having Shire-townes accordant, Philipstown and Marryborrow.

Septes, Irish of name planted in these quarters, they reckon, the Birnes, Tooles, Cauanaghes, which is the nation of Macmurrow, Omores, Oconnores, Odempseys, Odun.

Citties of best account, Dyvelin: the beauty and eye of Ireland, fast by a goodly river, which Cambreensis calleth Avenlifius. Ptolomy Libnius, they call the Lyffie. The seat hereof is in many respects comfortable, but less frequented of merchant strangers, because of the bard haven. Kildare hath Kildare and the Naass. Wexford hath Wexford and Ross. Kilkenny hath Kilkenny the best dry towne in Ireland on the Southside of the river Suirus, also Callan and Thomastowne.

Meath is devided into East and West Meath, and the counties of Longford. Here dwelleth ancient Irish families (sometime Princes & Potentates) Omalaghlen, Mac-Coghlan Obrien, Omulloy, Omadden, Macgoghigan, the Fox. This whole part, and the veyne of Finegale in Leinster, are best employed with husbandry, and taken to be the richest soyles in Ireland.

Connaghath hath as yet but the county Clare, the town of Athenry: & Galway, a proper neat city at the sea side. Herein Turlogh More Oconner was a peere, & parted the whole betwixt his two Sonnes, Cahal, and Bryen Oconnor. In it are now cheife Irish, Breni Oreli, Breni Oruarke, Oconnor Sligo, Odoude, Ohara, Macphilippin, Mac-dermot, Oconnordonn, Oconnor-Roe, the O-kellies, Mac-glomore, of Langues, L. Bermingham, Omaly, Mac-william Euter, Oflaherty, Clanricarde.

Vlster wherein Oneale & Odonil are cheife Irish, contayneth the counties, Louth, Down, Antrim, one moity of Droghdah (for the rest is in Meath) cheife town of Louth Dundalk, of Down, Down, & Carlingford, of Droghdagh, Droghdaghe, of Antrim, Cnockfergus, called also Cragfergus.

This part is dissevered from Meath and Leinster by the river Boandus, which breaketh out beside Loghfoyle, a bogg betweene Ardmagh, and S. Patrickes Purgatorie. Cambrensis reputeth the bogge at 30. miles in length, and halfe so much in breadth, and the same once firme Land, to have beeñe suddenly ouerflowen, for the bestiall incest committed there, unfit to be told.

In Mounster lye the counties of Waterford, Limericke, Cork, counties Pallatine of Tipperary, Kerry, and exempt from priviledge the Crosse of Tipperarie.

Waterford hath Dongarvon, and Waterford full of traffique with England, France, and Spaine, by meanes of their excellent good Haven.

Limericke hath Kilmallocke lately sackt by James Fitz Morice, and the Citie Limiricum, coasting on the sea, hard upon the river Shannon, whereby are most notably severed Mounster and Connagh.

Corke hath Kinsale, Yowghall, and the Cittie Corke, Tipperary hath Tipperary, Clonmell, Fidderstown, Cassell. Mounster was of old time devided into East-Mounster, Ormond, West-Mounster, Desmond, South-Mounster, Thomond. Here dwell Obrenes, Macnemaraes, Mack-mahownes, and one sept of the Offherties.

In these quarters lyeth the Countryes of O-Carroll, O-Magher, the white Knight, Mac-Ibrine, O-Gaunaghe.

Waterford contayneth the Powers, and Deces.

Corke the Barries Lands, Imokillie, Carbarrie, Maccarty-more, Maccarty-reagh, L. Roches lands, Osullivan, Muscry, L. Courcy, and diverse more, some of Irish blood, some degenerate and become Irish.

Limericke hath in it the Knight of the valley, William Burcke, Mac-Ibrine Ara, part of the white Knights Lands, Cosmay, Obrenes, and upon the edge of Kerrie the greene Knight, alias the knight of Kerrie.

Leinster butteth upon England, Mounster and Connaught upon France and Spaine, Ulster upon the Scottish Islands (which face with Hebrides) scattered between both realmes; wherein at this day, the Irish Scot Successour of the old Scythian Pict or Redshancke dwelleth.

The spirituall Iurisdiction <sup>a</sup> is ordered into 4. Provinces whereof the primacy was euer given (in reverence toward Saint Patricke their Apostle) to the Archbischoppe of Ardmagha, now called Ardmagh, which custome was since confirmed by Eugenius the 3. who sent withall 3. other prelates to be placed, one at Dublin, one at Cashell, & the last at Tuam. To these are suffraganes in right 29. and all they inferiour to the Primate of Ardmaghe: under his province are the Bishopprickes of Meath, Derry, Ardagh, Kilmore, Clogher, Downe, Coner, Clonmacknoes, Rapho, and Dromore.

Vnder Cashell are B. of Waterford, Lysmore, Corke, & Clone, Rosse, Ardigh, Limericke, Emely, Killalo, Ardferte.

Vnder Tuam the B. of Kilmaco, Olfine, Anagh-doune, Clonfert, Mayo. In this recount some diversities have happened by reason of personall and reall union of the Seas and for other alterations.

An old distinction there is of Ireland into Irish & English pales, for when the Irish had raised continual tumults against the English planted heere with the Conquest. At last they coursed them into a narrow circuite of certaine shires in Leinster, which the English did choose, as the fattest soyle, most defensible, their proper right, and most open to receive helpe from England. Hereupon it was termed their pale, as whereout they durst not peepe. But now both within this pale, uncivill Irish and some rebels doe dwell, and without it, Countreyes and cities English are well governed.

CAP. II.

The temporall Nobility.

BY conference with certaine gentlemen, attendants upon Sir Henry Sidney, Lord Deputie, (who excelleth in that knowledge) I tooke notice of the most noble English families in Ireland, which heere ensue with their surnames as they stand at this present.

Gerald Fitz Gerald Earle of Kildare, this house was of the nobilitie of Florence, came thence to Normandie, and so with earle Strangbow his kinsman, (whose Armes hee giveth) into Wales, neere of bloud to Rice ap Griffin Prince of Wales, by Vesta the mother of Morice Fitz Gerald, and Robert Fitz Stephens: with the said Earle it removed into Ireland, one of the speciall conquerours thereof. One record that I have seene, nameth a Geraldine the first Earle of Kildare, in anno 1289. But another saith, there dyed a Geraldine the fourth Earle of Kildare in anno 1316. the family is touched in the sonnet of Surrey, made upon Kildares sister, now Lady Clinton.

*From Tuscane came my Ladyes worthy race,
Faire Florence was sometime her ancient seate,
The western Isle whose pleasant shore doth face,
Wilde Cambres cliffes did give her lively heate,*

His eldest sonne Lord Gerald, Baron of Ophalye, I reade the Geraldine Lord of Ophalye, in anno 1270.

Sir Thomas Butler, Earle of Ormond and Ossorye: the Butlers were ancient English Gentlemen, preferred to the Earldome of Ormond in the first of Edward the 3. Anno 1327. which fell upon heires generall, lastly upon Sir Thomas Butler Earle of Wilshire, after whose disfavour it reversed to the name of Pierce Butler, whom little before King H. 8. had created Earle of Ossorye. Theo. Butler was Lord of the Carricke. An. 1205. And Earle of Tipperarie 1300. or sooner: The Latine History calleth him Dominum de Pincerna, the English Le Bottiller, whereby it appeareth that hee had some such honour about the Prince, his very surname is Becket, who was advanced by H. le 2. in recompence of the injurie done to Thomas of Canterbury their kinsman.

His eldest sonne Lord Butler, Viscount Thurles.

Gerald Fitz Gerald, Earle of Desmond, Morice Fitz Thomas, a Geraldine, was created Earle of Desmond the same yeare: soone after that the Butler became Earle of Ormond. The Irish say, that the elder house of the Geraldines was made Earle of Desmond, though Kildare be the more ancient Earle.

His eldest sonne L. Fitz Gerald of Desmond, Baron of Inshycoin.

Sir Richard Burcke, Earle of Clanriccard, a braunch of the English family, de Burge Lord Burgh, who were noble men before their arrivall into Ireland.

His eldest sonne Vlioke Burge Baron of Donkeline.

Conegher Obrene, Earle of Tumond: the name of Earle given to Murroughe Obrene for terme of life, and after to Donoghe Obrene, An. 5. Edw. 6. now confirmed to the heires male.

His eldest sonne Lo. Obrene, Baron of Ibrecane.

Mac Cartimore, Earle of Clarcar, created An. 1565.

His eldest sonne Lo: Baron of Valentia.

Viscount Barrie.

Viscount Roche.

Preston, Viscount of Gormanston, whereunto is lately annexed the Barony of Lounders, their auncestour Preston, then cheife Baron of the Exchequer, was made Knight in the field by Lionell Duke of Clarence, Lieutenant of Ireland.

Eustace alias Powere, Viscount of Baltinglassie, Lord of Kilkullen, to him and his heires male An. H. 8. 33. Their ancestour Robert le Powere was sent into Ireland with commission, and in his Off-spring hath rested heere since An. 1175. Powere alias Eustace is written Baron of Domvile An. 1317.

Sir Richard Butler, Viscount Mongaret, to him and his heires males An. Edw. 6. 5.

Viscount Deces.

Lord Birmingham, Baron of Athenrye, now degenerate and become meere Irish, against whom his auncestors served valiantly in An. 1300.

Sir Richard Bermingham was Lord of Athenrye.
1316.

John Bermingham Baron de Atrio dei, Anno 1318.
Mac Morice alias Fitz Gerald, Baron of Kerye.

Lord Courcye a poore man, not very Irish, the auncient descent of the Courcyes planted in Ireland with the Conquest.

Lord Flemmynge Baron of Slane, Simon Flemmynge was Baron of Slane in Anno 1370.

Plonket, Baron of Killyne: this family came in with the Danes, whereof they have as yet speciall monuments.

Nugent, Baron of Delvin.

Saint Laurence, Baron of Hothe.

Plonket, Baron of Doonesawny.

Barnewall, Baron of Trimleston: they came from little Brittaine, where they are at this day a great surname, upon their first arrivall they wonne great possessions at Beirnhaven, where at length by conspiracie of the Irish, they were all slaine, except one yong man, who then studied the common Lawes in England, who returning, dwelt at Dromnaghe beside Divelin, and his heires are there at this day: from thence a second brother remooved to Sirestone, and so to Trimlestone, and married the Lady Bruns, who caused him to be made Baron.

This writeth the Lord of Donsany.

Edward Butler, Baron of Donboyne, given to Edmond Butler esquire, and his heires males, An. 33. H. 8.

Fitz Patricke, Baron of upper Ossory, given to Barnabie Mac Gilpatricke, and his heires males, An. 33. H. 8.

Donnate Clonnaghe Mac Gilpatricke, was a peerelesse warriour in Anno 1219.

Plonket Baron of Louthe, to Sir Christopher Plonket and his heires males, An. 33. H. 8. This Barony was an Earldome in An. 1316. appertaining to Birmingham.

Oneale, Baron of Dongannon, to whom the Earldome of Terone was entayled by gift of H. 8.

Powere, Baron of Curraghmore.

Mac Suretan Lord Deseret, whom Sir Henry Sidney called Jordan de Exeter. This was Lord in the time of Lionell Duke of Clarence, An. 1361. now very wilde Irish.

Murroghe Obrene, Baron of Insickeyne, to him and his heires males, An. 35. H. 8.

Baronets.

Seintleger, Baronet of Slemarge, meere Irish.

Den, Baronet of Por man ston, waxing Irish.

Fitz Gerald, Baronet of Burnchurch.

Nangle, Baronet of the Navan.

English gentlemen of longest continuance in Ireland are the race of those which at this day, either in great povertie, or perill, doe keepe the properties of their auncestors lands in Ulster, being then companions to Courcy the conquerour and Earle of that part. These are the Savages, Iordanes, Fitz Symonds, Chamberlaines, Russells, Bensons, Audleyes, Whites, Fitz Vrsulyes, now degenerate, & called in Irish, Mac Mahon the Beares sonne.

CAP. III.

Nature of the soyle, and other incidents.

THE soyle is low and waterish, & includeth diverse little Islands, environed with bogges and marshes: Highest hilles have standing pooles in their toppe, Inhabitants (especially new come) are subiect to distillations, rhumes and flixes, for remedy whereof they use an ordinary drinke of Aquavitæ, so qualified in the making, that it dryeth more, and inflameth lesse, then other hote confections. The aire is wholsome, not altogether so cleare and subtle as ours of England. Of Bees good store, no vineyards, contrary to the opinion of some writers, who both in this and other errors touching the land, may easily be excused, as those that wrote of hearesay.

Cambrensis in his time, complaineth that Ireland had excesse of wood, and very little champaigne ground, but now the English pale is too naked: Turffe and Sea-coales is their most fuell: it is stored of kyne, of excellent horses, & hawkes, of fish and fowle. They are not without wolves, and greyhounds to hunt them, bigger of bone and limme then a colt. Their kyne, as also their cattle, and commonly what els soever the Countrey ingendreth (except man) is much lesse in quantity then ours of England. Sheepe few, and those bearing course fleeces, whereof they spinne notable rugge mantle. The country is very fruitefull both of corne and grasse, the grasse for default of Husbandrie (not for the cause alleaged in Polychronicon,) groweth so ranke in the north parts, that oft times it rotteth their Kyne. Eagles are well knowne to breed heere, but neither so bigge nor so many as Bookes tell. Cambrensis reporteth of his owne knowledge, and I heare it averred by credible persons, that Barnacles, thousands at once, are noted along the shoares to hang by the beakes, about the edges of putrified timber, shippes, oares, anchor-holdes, and such like: which in processe taking lively heate of the Sunne, become water-foules, and at their time of ripenesse either fall into the sea, or fly a broad into the ayre. Æneas Sylvius (that after was Pope Pius the second) writeth himselfe, to have perceaved the like experiment in Scotland, where he learned the truth hereof, to be found in the Islands Orchades. Horses they have of pace easie, in running wonderfull swift. Therefore they make of them great store, as wherein at times of need they repose a great peice of safetie. This broode, Raphael Volateranus saith, to have come at first from Arturia the country of Spaine, betweene Gallicea and Portugall, whereof they were called Asturcones a name now properly applyed to the Spanish Iennet.

I heard it verified by Honourable to Honourable, that a Nobleman (offered and was refused) for one such horse, an hundred kyne, five pound Lands, & an Airy of Hawks yearely during seven yeares. In the plaine of Kildare stood that monstrous heape of stones brought thither by Gyants from Affrique and removed thence to the plaine of Sarisbury at the instance of Aurel. Ambrose King of Brittaine. No venemous creping beast is brought forth or nourished, or can live here, being sent in, and therefore the spider of Ireland is well knowne, not to be venemous.

Onely because a frogge was found living, in the Meadowes of Waterford, somewhat before the conquest, they construed it to import their overthrowe. S. Bede writeth that Serpents conveyed hither did presently die being touched with smell of the land; and that whatsoever came hence was then of Sovraigne vertue against poyson. He exemplifieth in certaine men stung with Adders, who dranke in water the scrapings of Bookes that had beene of Ireland, and were cured.

Generally it is observed, the further West the lesse annoyance of pestilent creatures. The want whereof is to Ireland so peculiar, that whereas it lay long in question, to whether Realme, (Brittaine or Ireland) the Ile of Man should pertaine, the said controversie was decided, that forsoomuch as venemous beasts were knowne to breed therein, it could not be counted a naturall peice of Ireland.

Neither is this propertie to be ascribed to S. Patrickes blessing (as they commonly hold) but to the originall blessing of God who gave such nature to the situation and soyle from the beginning. And though I doubt not, but it fared the better in many respects for that holy mans prayer, yet had it this condition notified hundred of yeares ere he was borne.

CAP. IIII.

Of the Irish tongue and the name Hibernia, Ireland.

I FINDE it solemnely avouched in some of their pamphlets, that Gathelus, and after him Simon Brecke, divised their language out of all other tongues then extant in the world. But considering the course of enterchanging and blending speeches together, not by invention of Arte, but by use of talke, I am rather led to beleeve (seeing Ireland was inhabited within one yeare after the devision of the tongues) that Bastolenus a braunch of Iapheth who first seased upon Ireland, brought hither the same kinde of Speech, some one of the seventie two Languages, that to his family befell at the dissolution of Babell, unto whom succeeded the Scithians, Grecians, Ægyptians, Spaniards, Danes: of all which this tongue must needs have borrowed part, but specially retaining the steps of Spanish then spoken in Granado, as from their mightiest auncestors.<sup>c</sup> Since then to Henry Fitz Empresse the Conquerour, no such invasion happened them, as whereby they might be driven to infect their native language, untouched in manner for the space of 1700. yeares after the arrivall of Hiberius. The tongue is sharpe and sententious, offereth great occasion to quicke apothegmes and proper allusions, wherefore their common Iesters, Bards, and Rymers, are said to delight passingly those that conceive the grace and propriety of the tongue. But the true Irish indeede differeth so much from that they commonly speake, that scarce one among five score, can either write, read, or understand it. Therefore it is prescribed among certaine their Poets, and other Students of Antiquitie.

Touching the name Ibernia, the learned are not yet agreed. Some write it Hibernia, and suppose that the strangers finding it in an odde end of the world, wet and frosty, tooke it at the first for a very cold country, and accordingly named it, as to say, the winter land: Another bringeth a guesse of Irlamal,<sup>d</sup> of whom because I read nothing, I neither build upon that conjecture, nor controll it. Thirdly, they fetch it from Hiberus the Spaniard. Most credibly it is held that the Spaniards their founders for devotion toward Spaine, called then Iberia, and the rather for that themselves had dwelled besides the famous river Iberus, named this land Iberia, (for so John Leland, and many forraine Chroniclers write it,) or Ibernia, adding the letter n. for difference sake, there being a rich Citty which Ptolome recounteth called then Ibernis, <sup>e</sup> & from Ibernia proceedeth Iberland or Iuerland, from Iuerland by contraction Ireland, for so much as in corruption of common talke, wee finde that v, with his vowell, are easily lost and suppressed. So wee say ere for ever, ore for over, ene for even, nere for never, shoole for shovell, dile for divell. At the same time it was also named Scotia in reverence of Scota, the wife of Gathelus, auncient Capitaine of those Iberians, that flitted from Spaine into Ireland. And the said Scota was olde grandame to Hiberus and Hirimor, after the Scottish Chronicles, <sup>f</sup> who in any wise will have their Countrymen derived from the Irish, and not from the Brittaines.

CAP. V.

Dispositions of the People.

THE People are thus inclined ; religious, franke, amorous, irefull, sufferable, of paines infinite, very glorious, many sorcerers, excellent horsemen, delighted with Warres, great almes-givers, passing in hospitalitie: the lewder sort both Clarkes and Laymen, are sensuall and loose to leachery above measure. The same being vertuously bred up or reformed, are such mirrours of holinesse and austoritie, that other Nations retaine but a shewe or shadow of devotion in comparison of them. As for abstinence and fasting which these dayes make so dangerous, this is to them a familiar kinde of chastisement: In which vertue and diverse other, how farre the best excell, so farre in gluttonie and other hatefull crimes the vicious they are worse then too badde. They follow the dead corpes to the grave with howlings and barbarous out-cryes, pittyfull in appearance, whereof grew (as I suppose) the Proverbe, to weepe Irish. The up-landish are lightly abused to believe and avouche idle miracles and revelations vaine and childish, greedy of prayse they bee, and fearefull of dishonour. And to this end they esteeme their Poets who write Irish learnedly, and penne their sonnettis heroicall, for the which they are bountifullly rewarded. But if they send out libells in disprayse, thereof the Gentlemen, especially the meere Irish, stand in great awe. They love tenderly their foster children, and bequeathe to them a childe's portion, whereby they nourish sure friendshippe, so beneficall every way, that commonly five hundredth kyne and better are given in reward to winne a noble mans childe to foster. They are sharpe-witted, lovers of learning, capable of any studie whereunto they bend themselves, constant in travaile, adventerous, intractable, kinde-hearted, secret in displeasure.

Hitherto the Irish of both sortes meere, and English, are affected much indifferently, saving that in these, by good order, and breaking the same, vertues are farre more pregnant. In those others, by licentious and evill custome, the same faults are more extreame and odious, I say, by licentious and evill custome, for that there is daylie tryall of good natures among them. How soone they bee reclaymed, and to what rare gifts of grace and wisedome, they doe and have aspired. Againe, the very English of birth, conversant with the brutish sort of that people, become degenerate in short space, and are quite altered into the worst ranke of Irish Rogues, such a force hath education to make or marre. It is further to bee knowne, that the simple Irish are utterly another people then our Englishe in Ireland, whome they call despitefully boddai Sassoni's, and boddai Ghalt, that is, English and Saxon churles, because of their English auncestors planted heere with the Conquest, and sithence with descent hath lasted now 400. yeares. Of this people therefore severally by themselves I must intreate. Yet none otherwise then as they stand unfiled, and serve their accustomed humours, with whom I joyne all such as either by living neere them, or by liking their trade are transformed into them.

CAP. VI.

Of the meere Irish.

TOUCHING the meere Irish, I am to advertise my Reader, that hee impute not to them the faults of their Auncestors, which heere I have noted for two causes. First, that when the same are reade in Cam-brensis, Solinus, or others, he confounds not the times, but may be able distinctly to consider their manners, then different from these dayes. Secondly, that it may appeare how much Ireland is beholding to God for suffering them to be conquered, whereby many of these enormities were cured, and more might be, would themselves be plyable.

In some corners of the land they used a damnable superstition, leaving the right armes of their Infants males unchristened (as they tearmed it) to the intent it might give a more ungracious and deadly blow.

I found a fragment of an Epistle, wherein a vertuous Monke declareth, that to him (travailing in Vlster) came a grave Gentleman about Easter, desirous to be confessed and howseled, who in all his life time had never yet received the blessed Sacrament. When he had said his minde, the Priest demaunded him, whether he were faultlesse in the sinne of Homicide? Hee answered, that hee never wist the matter to bee haynous before, but being instructed thereof, hee confessed the murther of five, the rest hee left wounded, so as he knew not whether they lived or no. Then was he taught that both the one, and the other were execrable, and verie meekelie humbled himselfe to repentance.

Solinus writeth that they woonted (because they would seeme Terrible and Martiall,) to embrue their faces in the bloude of their Enemyes slaine. Strabo the famous Geographer, who flourished under Augustus and Tiberius Cæsar, more then fifteene hundred yeares agoe, telleth (without asseveration) that the Irish were great Gluttons, eaters of mans flesh: and counted it Honourable for Parents deceased, to bee eaten up of their Children, and that in open sight they medled with their Wiues, Mothers, and Daughters: which is the lesse incredible, considering what Saint Hierome avoucheth of the Scots their Offspring and Allies, and what all Histories doe witnessesse of the Scithians their auncient founders. See Strabo lib. 4. Geograph.

Although since the time of Saint Patricke, Christianitie was never extinct in Ireland, yet the governement being hayled into contrarie factions, the Nobilitie lawlesse, the multitude willfull, it came to passe that Religion waxed with the temporall common sort cold and feeble, untill the Conquest did settle it, especiallie in cases of restrainte and Discipline. The Honourable state of Marriage they much abused, either in contracts, unlawfull meetings, the Leviticall and Canonicall degrees of prohibition, or in divorcementes at pleasure, or in ommitting Sacramental solemnities, or in retayning either Concubines or Harlots for Wiues. Yea even at this day, where the Cleargie is fainte, they can bee content to Marrie for a yeare and a day of probation, and at the yeares end, to returne her home upon any light quarrells, if the Gentlewomans friendes bee weake and unable to avenge the injurie. Never heard I of so many dispensations for Marriage, as those men shewe, I pray God graunt they bee all authentique and buylded upon sufficient warrant.

Covenant and Indent with them never so warilie, never so preciselie, yet they have beene founde faithlesse and periured. Where they are joyned in colour of surest Amitie, there they intended to kill. This ceremonie reporteth Cambrensis. The parties to bee coupled in League, meete at Church, become Godseptes, or Allies, beare each other on his backe certaine paces in a Ring, kisse together holy reliques, take blessing of the Bishoppe, offer each to other a droppe of his owne bloude, and drinke it up betweene them: Even in the doing hereof, they practise muuall destruction.

They have beene used in solemne controversies, to protest and sweare by Saint Patrickes Staffe, called Bachal esu, which oath, because upon breach thereof heavy plagues ensued them, they feared more to breake, then if they had sworne by the holy Evangelist.

In Ulster thus they used to Crowne their King, a white cow was brought forth, which the King must kill, and seeth in water whole, and bathe himselfe therein starke naked, then sitting in the same Caldron, his people about him, together with them, he must eat the flesh, and drinke the broath, wherein he sitteth, without cuppe or dish or use of his hand. So much of their old Customes. Now a few words of their trade at this present.

Cleare men they are of Skinne and hue, but of themselves carelesse and bestiall. Their Women are well fauoured, cleare coloured, faire handed, bigge and large, suffered from their infancie to grow at will, nothing curious of their feature and proportion of body.

Their infants of the meaner sort, are neither swaddled, nor lapped in Linnen, but foulded up starke naked into a Blankett till they can goe, and then if they get a piece of rugge to cover them, they are well sped. Linnen shirts the rich doe weare for wantonnes and bravery, with wide hanging sleeves playted, thirtie yards are little enough for one of them. They have now left their Saffron, and learne to wash their shirts, foure or five times in a yeare. Proud they are of long crised glibbes, and doe nourish the same with all their cunning: to crop the front thereof they take it for a notable peece of villany. Shamrotes, Water-cresses, Rootes, and other hearbes they feede upon: Oatemale and Butter they cramme together. They drinke Whey, Milke, and Beefe broth, Flesh they devoure without bread, corne such as they have they keepe for their horses. In haste and hunger they squeeze out the blood of raw flesh, and aske no more dressing thereto, the rest boyleth in their stomaches with Aquavitæ, which they swill in after such a surfeite, by quarts & pottles. Their kyne they let blood which growen to a jelly they bake and overspread with Butter, and so eate it in lumpes.

One office in the house of great men is a tale-teller, who bringeth his Lord on sleepe, with tales vaine and frivilous, whereunto the number give sooth and credence. So light they are in beleeving what-soever is with any countenance of gravitie affirmed by their Superiours, whom they esteeme and honour, that a lewd Prelate within these few yeares needy of money, was able to perswade his parish: That S. Patricke in striving with S. Peter to let an Irish Galloglass into Heaven, had his head broken with the keyes, for whose releife he obtained a Collation.

Without either precepts or observation of congruity they speake Latine like a vulgar language, learned in their common Schooles of Leach-craft and Law, whereat they begin Children, and hold on sixteene or twentie yeares conning by roate the Aphorismes of Hypocrates, and the Civill Institutions, and a few other parings of those two faculties. I have seene them where they kept Schoole, ten in some one Chamber, groveling upon couches of straw, their Bookes at their noses, themselves lying flatte prostate, and so to chaunte out their lessons by peece-meale, being the most part lustie fellowes of twenty five yeares and upwards.

Other Lawyers they have, liable to certaine families which after the custome of the country determine and judge causes. These consider of wrongs offered and received among their neighbours, be it murder, or fellony, or trespass, all is redeemed by composition, (except the grudge of parties seeke revenge :) and the time they have to spare from spoyling and proyning, they lightly bestow in parling about such matters. The Breighoon (so they call this kind of Lawyer) sitteth him downe on a banke, the Lords and Gentlemen at variance round about him, and then they proceede.

They honour devoute Fryars and Pilgrimes, suffer them to passe quietly, spare them and their mansions, whatsoever outrage they shew to the country besides them. To robbe and prey their enemies, they deeme it none offence, nor seeke any meanes to recover their losse, but even to watch them the like turne. But if neighbours and friends send their Cators to purloyne one another, such Actions are judged by the Breigh-ooones aforesaid.

Toward the living they are noysome and malicious, the same being dead they labour to avenge eagerly and fiercely. They love and trust their Foster Brethren more then their owne. Turlogh Leinagh O'neale that now usurpeth, is said to repose in them his greatest surety.

Strumpets are there too vile and abominable to write of, which not onely without feare, but also without remorse doe advance themselves in numbring what noblemen have had liking to their bodies. Hee that can bring most of his name into the field, base or other, triumpheth exceedingly. For increase of which name, they allow themselves not onely whoores, but also choise & store of whoores. One I heard named which hath (as he calleth them) more then ten wiues, in twentie places.

There is among them a brother-hood of Carrowes that professe to play at Cards all the yeare long, and make it their onely occupation. They play away Mantle and all to the bare skinne, and then trusse themselves in strawe or in leaves, they waite for passengers in the high way, invite them to a game upon the greene, and aske no more but companions to hold them sport, for default of other stufse they pawne portions of their glibbe, the nailes of their fingers and toes, their privie members; which they lose or redeeme at the curtesie of the winner.

Where they fancie and favour, they are wonderfull kinde, they exchange by commutation of wares for the most part, and have utterly no coyne stirring in any great Lords houses. Some of them be richly plated: their Ladies are trimmed rather with massie Iewels, then with garish apparell, it is counted a beautie in them to be tall, round and fat.

The inheritance descendeth not to the Sonne, but to the Brother, Nephew, or Cousin germaine eldest and most valiant: for the Childe being oftentimes left in nonage or otherwise young and unskillfull, were never able to defend his patrimonie, being his no longer then he can hold it by force of armes. But by that time he grow to a competent age, and have buryed an Vnkle or two, he also taketh his turne, and leaveth it in like order to his Posterity. This custome breedeth among them continuall Warres and treasons.

CAP. VII.

The most auncient Inhabitants of Ireland.

THE honourable Historian Titus Livius, yeeldeth certaine priviledge to antiquitie, and will have it held excused, if percase for advancement of their Citties, they straine a point of truth, and derive a first foundation from one or other, of their supposed Gods: wherefore though I can no lesse doe then reject a fable concerning the arrivall of Noes Neece into this Island, yet this kinde of forgery being somewhat universall, seeing every Chronicler paineth himselfe, to fetch his reckoning with the farthest let him hardly be pardoned, who led by relation of his elders, committed first to writing so dull a tale. As for the multitude of writers that agree thereon, they are in effect but one writer, seeing the latest ever borrowed of the former, and they all of Cambreensis, who affirmeth it not, but onely alleadgeth the received opinion of Irish Histories, yea rather in the foote of that Chapter, he seemeth to mistrust it, and posteth it over to the credit of his authors: so then if the greatest weight hereof doe consist in Irish antiquities, which the learned here confesse to be stuffed with such implements, notoriously felt to be vaine and frivolous, I trust I shall not seeme contentious, nor singular in damning such a fable, not onely false, but also impossible. Thus they say, In the yeare of the world, 1536. The Patriarch Noe began to preach vengeance upon the people for their accursed lives, to builde his Arke, to enforme his kindred and speciall friends severally, that within few yeares the earth should be sunke in waters, if they amended not. This did he before the generall flood one hundred and twentie yeares, when every man foreslept the monition, onely a Neece of his named Cesara misdoubting the worst, and hearing her Vnkle prophesie that all should be drowned for sinne, determined with her adherents, to seeke adventures into some forraine Island, perswaded that if shee might happely finde a Countrie never yet inhabited, and so with sinne undefiled, the generall sentence of Gods anger should there take no place. Whereupon she furnished a navy, and fled into Ireland, with three men, Bithi, Laigria, Fintan, and fifty women, left unto her after many shipwrackes. The shore where she landed, & where she lyeth entombed, is at this day called Navicularum littus. The very stones wherein the memorie hereof hath beene preserved from the violence of waters, were said to be seene of some. Within forty dayes after her footing in Ireland, the deluge prevailed universally, and all this coast was cast away.<sup>g</sup> Now to ommit that part of this device, which is too flat, and ridiculous, if we consider that before the flood, no part of the Earth was knownen, nor touched beside Syria,<sup>h</sup> where the first age dwelled, that sailing was then utterly unheard of in the world, the first vessell being by Gods owne direction wrought, that she might have sped at home, would she repent with more ease and surety, that Iapheth with the Hebrewes, and Iason with the Greekes, were the first pilots: that the Records hereof graven in stone, is but a borrowed invention from Josephus. These things I say considered, it wilbe no hard matter to descry the falsehood, wherin I would be more exquisite, were it worth my labour. We need not so ambitiously runne to Cesara, to begge a forged evidence, seeing without her helpe, Ireland must be confessed to have been knowne and peopled with the same kinred, even with the first Islands of the world. For within three hundred yeares after the generall Floud, immediately after the confusione of tongues, when Iapheth and his posterity, imboldened by the example of Noe, adventured by ship into divers West Islands, <sup>i</sup> there was in his retinew one of his progeny, Bastolenus, who conceiving stomach and courage at the late successe of Nemrodus, Ninus his kinsman (then newly intruded upon the Monarch of Assyria) & wandred so farre West, intending to rule without compeeres, till Fortune cast him and his people upon the coast of Ireland. <sup>k</sup> There he settled with his three sonnes, Languinus, Salanus, Ruthurgus, active and stout gentlemen, who searching the Land through & through, left their owne names by three notable places, Languini stagnum, mons Salangi, since named S. Dominicks hill, and Ruthurgi stagnum. Of Bastolenus is little remembred, save that in short space with many hands working at once, he plained a great part of the Country, then overgrown with woods and thickets. This posterity kept the Land under the government of these three sonnes & their off-spring, about 300. yeares. Together with Bastolenus, arrived in Ireland certaine godlesse people of the stocke of Nemrod, worthily tearmed a gyant, as one that in bodily shape exceeded proportion, & used his strength to winne soveraigntie, & to oppresse the vveake with rapine and violence: That linage (Chams breed) grevv to great numbers, & alvvay bethought them of getting mastery, vheresover they tarryed. One cause vvas their bodily force answverable to their hugenesse of quantity:<sup>1</sup> another the example of Cham Zoroastes, that magitian, and Nemrodus, Ninus his Nephew, which two in themselves and their progenies, were renowned throughout the world, as victorious Princes over two mighty Kingdomes Ægypt and Assyria. Thirdly they maligned the blessings bestowed upon Sem and Iapheth, counting it necessary for themselves, to stirre, and prevent Dominions, lest the curse of slavery prophesied by Noe should light upon them, as notwithstanding it did at last.

Thus irked, they began to kicke at their Governours, and taking head, set up a King of their owne faction, nourishing the same, and annoying the Subjects incessantlie, the successse on both sides was variable, quarrels increased, the enemie caught handfast, & every day bred a new skirmish. It seemed intolerable, & very necessity compelled them to try their whole force in one Battle, either utterly to weede out the Gyants, or to die free. Peace therefore concluded among themselves, for any private grudge hitherto maintayned, all sorts brake truce and amity with the Gyants, and straited them up so, that from all corners of the land, they must needes assemble into one field and fight for the better, maynelie they tugged certaine houres, but in conclusion the lawfull Kings prevayled, the miscreants done to death. See now the mockery of Fortune, Victors they were, and promised themselves a security. Anger & insolencie over-turned all, for what with spoiling the dead carcases, what with murthering the remaynder of that generation, man, woman, and childe, in all parts of the Realme, vouchsafing them no buryall, but casting them out like a sort of dead dogges, <sup>m</sup> there ensued through the stench of those carryons such a mortall pestilence, infecting not onely the places where they lay, but the ayre round about by contagion, that beside those few which by sea returned homeward, few escaped alive, and heereby hangeth a tale, From this plague (say the Irish) was preserved Ruanus the Gyant, who from time to time kept true record of their histories, else utterly done away by sundry casualties of death, warre, spoyle, fire, forraine victories, and he (forsooth) continued till the yeare of Christ 430. and told S. Patrick all the newes of the country requiring of him to bee baptized, and so died, when he had lived no more but two thousand and forty.

one yeares: which is above twice the age of Methusalem. Had it beene my chaunce in Ireland, to meeete & conferre with this noble Antiquarie, hee might have eased me of much travell. These things I note for no other purpose, but that the simple stumbling upon such blinde legends should be warned to esteeme them as they are, idle fantasies; wherewith some of their Poets, dallyed at the first, and after through error and rudenes it was taken up for a sad matter.

CAP. VIII.

The severall Inhabitants of Ireland from Bastolenus.

OF an infinite number of Gyants slaine, certaine hid families lurked and escaped the common mischiefe, whom at length penury constrainyd to forsake their dennes, and to pilfer for meate, when they perceived the murraine of men and beasts, and that none gave them resistance, they waxed hardie, & searching the land, found it wel-nigh desolate, wherefore they harboured themselves in the clearest coast: and easily subduing the poore soules remaining, revived their blood, and became Lords of the whole Iland 60. yeares.

Among the Sonnes of Iapheth, Genesis recounteth Magog who had now planted his people in Scithia within Tanaris, from whom at this day the Turkes are descended. They hearing the hard happe of their fathers lyne, cast out by the collaterall braunches of Cham, the late King of the Bactrians, <sup>n</sup> their odious neighbours, sent into Ireland Nemodus with his foure sonnes, Starius, Gerbavel, Amimus, Fergusius, captaunes over a faire company, who passing by Greece and there taking up such as would seeke fortunes, finally landed here, held the country, multiplyed, but not without continuall warre upon the Gyants aforesaid, who in th'end vanquished and chased them thence againe into Greece, after 216. yeares, from Anno mundi 2533. from which time untill the comming of Dela his sonnes, the Gyants possessed it peaceably without forreine invasion. But themselves being disordered, and measuring all things by might, seditiously vexed each other, nor were they ever able to frame a commonwealth.

That espyed five brethren, sonnes to Dela the Gre-cian, <sup>o</sup> notorious Pilots, named Gaudius, Genandius, Sagandius, Rutheragius, Slanius, the posterity of Nemodus expulsed successors, who fortified their navyes, and finding the Countrey but weake, wanne it entirely, rooted out the old enemy, divided the Iland into five parts, & in each of them severally raigned, for better contention of all sides, they agreed to fixe a meare stone in the middle point of Ireland, to which stone every of their Kingdomes should extend, and be partakers of the commodities then chiefly found in that soile. These are also supposed to have invented the distribution of shires into Cantredes, every Cantrede or Barony, conteining an hundred Townships, where-with the name and use of hundreds, well knowne in England, might seeme to accord.

Variance for the chiefty set the foure brethren at a lovve ebbe, and then Slanius perched over them all, encroached every way round about the middle stone certaine miles for provision and furniture of his owne houshold, which plot in time obtained the name of one generall part, and now maketh up the fift, Media. Meth it was called either for moytie of Cantredes, being but sixteene, vwhereas the rest comprised thirty tvvo apeece, or for the site thereof in the navell of Ireland. This hee assigned to the Monarch a surplus over and above his Inheritance, vwhich notwithstanding grevv to a severall Kingdome, and allowved thereof certaine parts by composition. Not long after dyed Slanius, & vvas buried in a mountaine of Meth that carrieth his name. Thirty yeares the Monarchy vvas possessed in this order, but shortly the Princes ovning fealty, beganne to stomach the Intrusion of Slanius, & vwhen he vvas once rid, they disdained his successour, whereupon ensued everlasting Battels. The Monarchy was laide downe, then fell they at debate for the land of Meth, which strife could never be appeased. In the necke of those troubles came over a new army of Scithians, who claymed also from Nemodus their fore-father, and they tooke parts, and made parts, set all in uproare with sword, and havocke. ¶ To be short, they spent themselves one upon another so fiercely and furiously, that now they reckoned not what nation or what souldiour they received in, to keepe up or beate downe a side. By which occasion the Britaines also put in a foot, who discovering the state of the land to their Princes, opened a gappe for Brennus the brother of Belinus, to direct his course thither vwith the same Navy vwhich he had furnished to serve Signimius then King of Lyons amid the Galles in France. But Brennus took small effect. Before him also divers Kings of Brittaine had scope in Ireland. Insomuch that Gurguntius the sonne of Beline, reputed the same by lineall descent among his ovne Dominions. Notvwithstanding they never injoyed it longer then they could keepe possession perforce, and often vvere they repelled and vwearyed vwith seeking after it, as vwherein they found small fruite, and blovves enough. Lastly came the Spaniards from Biscaye, conducted by foure Captaines, of vvhose arryvall before I speake, I must repeate their originall somevhat farther, and so give a light to the assoyling of a controversie, that is, vwhether the Irish came from Ægypt, or from Spaine. It shall appeare they came from both.

The young Greeke being very wise, valiant and well

now Compostella.<sup>t</sup> The remnant passed with him into Ireland, where the Barbarians highly honoured him, for his cunning in all languages, who also greatly perfected and beautified the Irish tongue, taught them letters, sought up their antiquities, practised their youth in martiall feates, after his Greeke and Ægyptian manner. Finally so well he pleased them that to gratifie such a Benefactour, they were content to name the Iland after him Gathelia, and after his wife Scotia. Truely that Scotia is the auncient appellation of Ireland, all Chroniclers agree, as it shalbe more plaine, when wee touch the Scottish pedigree. A brute there is in Ireland but uncertainelie fathered, that in remembrance of Pharao, their good lord, the Kerne pitching his Dart, cryeth of courage faro, faro; but the learned thinke that to bee taken from the Spaniard, who in his Ioco dicano exclaymeth fabo, fabo.

The people left in the coast of Spaine, founded the city of Bayon, now part of Gascoigne, and replenished all the shore towards Africk,<sup>u</sup> and the edges of Portugall, Castile, Galæcia, towardes the sea Cantabricum, well nigh 200. yeares, after which time some of them began to minde another travaile, because they were pestered with Inhabitants, and whether they ever sped to Ireland, it is unknowne, at the leastwise in the raigne of Gurguntius the Brittaine, then chiefe Lord of Bayon, foure brethren Spaniards, whereof two are noted, Hiberus and Hirimor, not the sonnes of Gathelus (as writeth Boethius) but his off-spring, understanding that divers Western Ilands were empty, desirous to live in ease and elbovv-room, sayled Westvvard vwith a great retinue of men, <sup>v</sup> vvo-men and babes, hovering long about the Ilands Or-chades in 60. great ships, untill by good hap they met vwith Gurguntius, then returning from the con-quest of Denmarke, <sup>w</sup> vwho had refused to pay him the tribute, vwhich Belinus his father vvan, him they be-sought <sup>x</sup> (considering their vwant of victuals, unable any longer to dvvell in their ships, accumbred vwith carriage of vvomen & children) to direct & further them to some place of habitation, proffering to be-come his liege people to hold the same of him & his heires for ever. The King advising himselfe, remem-bred vwith vwhat difficultie he kept the Irish in sub-jection, & conceived hope that these strangers vwould endeavor either to stub out that unruly generation, or to nurture them, & so taking their oathes and hos-tages, <sup>y</sup> he mann'd their ships, stored them vwith vic-tuall & munition, & seated them in Ireland. Thus had the Brittaines an elder right to the Realme of Ireland, then by the conquest of Henry the 2. vwhich title they never surceased to claime, & somtimes pre-vailed, as in the dayes of King Arthur, to vvhom the Irish Princes agnized their tribute and appearance, made at his Parliament in urbe Legionum, vwhich I take to be Westchester, called of old Carleon, as divers other citties vvere, vvhetherin the Romanes placed the legions. Again the Kings of Britain vvere then Lords of the place vvhence this people came, so as their vwinninges must have beene the Kings Do-minion.

To all this when their owne free assent, the deditio[n] of other Princes, lawfull conquest and prescription is adjoyned, it forceth an invincible title. But to prosecute our purpose. Those Iberians being substantially ayded of Gurguntius, enjoyed the Lands, bestowed themselves foure brethren into foure parts thereof, un-till their pride and ambition armed two against other two, Hiberus and his brother against Hirimor and his. In this conflict Hirimor slew Hiberus, and raigned quietly. At this time the countrey was first named Ibernia, as I have declared in the third Chapter. The King to avoyde obloquie and slander, purged himselfe to his subjects, that neither malici-ously nor contentiously, but for his necessary defence and safeguard he had borne armes against his brother. And to witnesse how farre he was from desire to rule alone, he nominated speciall Captaines to be Kings under him of their severall Countryes, reserving to himselfe but one fourth part, and the portion of Meth allotted to the Monarchie for the better maintenance of his part.

These afterward clambered into five Kingdomes incompatible, Leinster, Connaght, Vlster, Mounster in two portions, and sometimes to more by usurpations and compositions, but ever one was elected the Monarch over all.

An hundred and thirtie chiefe Kings are reckoned of this Nation from Hirimon to Laigirus the sonne of Nealus magnus, in whose time the blessed Bishop Patricius converted them to Christianity.

CAP. X.

The comming of the Picts into Ireland. <sup>2</sup>

NOW lived the Irish in tollerable order under their sundry Kings,<sup>a</sup> and applyed themselves to peace and gathering of wealth, when suddainely Rodericke a Red-shank of Scythia fled thither with a small company of Galleys, and winde-driven in compassing round about the British coast, were happely blowne ashore into Ireland. These are the Picts, a people from their cradle dissentious, land-leapers, mercilesse, sowre and hardy, being presented to the King, they craved Interpreters,<sup>b</sup> which granted, Roderick their Chieftaine uttered for him and his, the request in this manner.

Not as degenerate from the courage of our auncestors, but inclining our selves to the bent and swaye of fortune, we are become suppliants to Ireland, that never before have humbled our selves to any, Looke Sir King, eye us well, It is not light prowesse that hath caused these valiant bodies to stoop. Scithians we are, and the Picts of Scithia, great substance of glory lodgeth in these two names, what shall I tell of the civill Tumult that hath made us leave our home? or rippe up old Historyes to make strangers bemoane us? Let our vassailes and children discourse it at large and leysure, if perhaps you vouchsafe us any leysure in the Land: To which effect and purpose your infinite necessities pray your favours. A King of a King, Men of Men, Princes can consider how neere it concerneth their honour and surety to proppe up the state of a King defaced by Treason, and men will remember nothing better beseemeth the nature of man, then to feele by compassion the grieves of men. Admit we beseech you these scattered reliques of Scithia, If your Realmes bee narrow, we are not many. If the soyle be barren, we are born to hardnesse. If you live in peace, we are your subjects. If you warre, we are your Souldiours. We aske no kingdome, no wealth, no triumph in Ireland. We have brought our selves, and left these casualtyes with the enemie. Howsoever it like you to esteeme of us, we shall easily learne to like it, when we call to minde, not what we have beene, but what we are.

Great consultations was had upon this request, and many things debated too and fro. In the end they were answered, that their antiquities layde forcible arguments, wherefore it could not be expedient to accept the Scithians into Ireland, that mingling of nations in a Realme breedeth quarrels remedilesse, that Ireland finding scarcity rather of roome then of people, that those few inferred amongst a many might quickly disturbe and put the whole out of joyst. But quoth they, though wee may not dwell together yet shall you finde us your very good neighbours and friends. Not farre hence lyeth the Iland of Brittaine, in the north thereof: your manhood and polycies shall winne you scope enough, our Capitaines shall conduct you the way, our strength shall helpe to settle you, addresse your shippes and hye you thither.<sup>c</sup> With this perswasion they shaped course towards the north of Brittaine, now called Scotland, where contrary to all expectation Marius the King awayted their comming, and gave them there a sharpe battle, wherein Rodericke was slaine, with diverse of his band. Them which remained and appealed to mercy, he licensed to inhabite the uttermost borders of Scotland: Wives they wanted to encrease their Issue, and because the Brittaines scorned to match their daughters with such a foward and beggerly people, the Picts continued their first acquaintance with the Irish and by entreaty obtained wives from them, conditionally that if the Crowne should happe to fall in question they should then yeeld thus much prerogative to the woman as of the female blood royall, rather then of the male to choose their Prince, which Covenant, saith S. Bede,<sup>d</sup> the Picts are well knowne to keepe at this day.

But long afore this time the Scottish Chronicles mention the arrivall of Almaine Picts into the marches now of England and Scotland, vwith whom certaine Irish called then also Scotts joyned against the Brittaines,<sup>e</sup> devising to erect a kingdome there, aswell to fortify themselves, as to gratifie the Irish, who detracting their obedience lately promised to Gurguntius, practised all they might to abridge the kingdome of the Brittaines. First therefore came from Ireland, Fergusius the sonne of Ferchardus, a man very famous for his skill in blazoning of armes.<sup>f</sup> Himselfe bare the Red Lyon rampant in a golden field. There was in Ireland a monument of Marble fashioned like a Throne, which Simon Brecke a companion to Hiberius and his brethren found in the journey, & because he deemed the finding thereof to be ominous to some Kingdome, he brought it along with him, and layde it up in the country for a Iewell. This marble Fergusius obtained towards the prospering of his voyage, and in Scotland he left it, which they used many yeares after in Coronation of their King at Scona. But Fergusius though he be scored in the row of Kings, for one, and the first, yet he held himselfe there obscurely, sundry times beat backe into Ireland, where he was finallie drowned by misfortune within the Creeke of Knockfergus. That Fergusius encountered with Coilus the Brittaine and slew him, as writeth the Scotts, it is impossible except they mistake the name of Coilus for Calius, with whom indeede the age of Fergusius might well meete, and the rather for that in the first yeare of his raigne, the Picts entred, and then Fergusius immediately after them, 330. yeares ere Christ was borne. Now Coilus raigned in the yeare of our Lord, 124. about which time befell the second arrivall of the Picts in Brittaine, so it seemeth they mistake by a slight error, Coilus for Calius, and the second arrivall of the Picts, for the former. This confusion of Histories is learnedly noted by Cooper in his generall collection of Chronicles.

CAP. XI.

How the Irish settled themselves in Scotland.

RETURNE wee now to the course of our Historie, while the Picts were bestowed in the north of Brittaine and waxed populous, & the Irish made sundry arrands over to visite their Daughters, Nephewes, and kindred. In often comming and going, they noted waste places, and little Islands not replenished, but rather neglected and suffered to grow wilde. Hereof in Ireland they advertised their Prince, namely Reuther or Rheuda, who being the Issue of Fergusius, bethought himselfe of his interest to certaine peeces of land beside the nation of the Picts. Hee therefore well appointed, partly by composition, and some deale perforce stepped into those hamlets which no man occupied, & proceeded handsomely to reare his kingdome. By little and little he edged forward, and got betweene the Picts and Brittaines on this side the Scottish banke, which he possessed but a season. The place was thereof named Rheudisdale, now Riddesdale, (asmuch to say, as the part of Rheuda) for dahal in their language, signifieth part. In those quarters after sundry conflicts with the borderers, hee was by them slaine, but the kingdome lasted in his successors still, and the two nations the Picts and the Irish lovingly suffered each other to thrive. The Scotts caught up the Islands & the Frontiers. The Picts dwelt in the middle: Soone after the peace betweene them, vvent suspitions & the diversities of people, place, custome, language, vwith the memorie of old grudges stirred up such inward jealousies and hate, that it seemed they were easie to kindle, & as in such factions, there never wanted drifte to drive a tumult, so it happened that certaine of the Nobilitie of the Scotts rescant next them had with some difficultie, received out of Greece a Molossian Hound,<sup>h</sup> which breede both in swiftnesse of foote, and and in sweetnesse of opening, was reputed peerelesse.

This Hound, a willfull Gentleman, a Pict, stole home, and therewith gratified his Prince, glad of the novelty, and little thoughtfull of the displeasure.<sup>i</sup> Contrarywise the Irish, wood for anger at this dishonour, and injury, assembled in poste haste under Eugenius their King, and after brawling, fell to spoyle, and so to blowes; whereof parts and stomackes being even, the fortune was variable.<sup>k</sup> In this division they scambled out a few yeares, untill the malice of Carassus a Brittaine forced a quietnesse betweene them to abuse their helpe against th' Empire. But hee was shortly slaine by Alectus the Romane Captaine, and hereupon the old sore waxed rawe: To heape the mischiefe, a Brittish Lord named Maximus, aspiring to the kingdome, sent an ambassadge to Ethodius king of Picts, pleading with him a league of friendship, utterly to expulse the Irish Scot: conditioning withall their assistance to chase the Romanes out of Brittaine, which was concluded, and by this confederacie, after many lamentable skirmishes, the Irish were betrayed, Eugenius the King, Ethai his brother, and Ericus his nephew, and also the residue, such as could escape the enemies sword, fled thence, some into Norway, some into Ireland their first home.

Maximus<sup>1</sup> watching his time, despairing of the Brittish Kingdome, and espying the Picts tyred with continuall vvarres, turned his povver upon them, and brought them to such an exigent, that they had no readier shift then to crave helpe from Ireland,<sup>m</sup> and so by degrees vwhen some private persons, nourishers of the quarrell, vvere out-vvorne, the matter of malice vvas qualified, and the remnant of the Irish Scots, vwith their friends and off-spring called home to their dvvel-ling, after their first banishment, 43. yeares expired.

From this time<sup>n</sup> forvward the amity vvaxed steddy, and the Irish under Fergusius the second their King vvan such credit, that finally the nation of Picts vvere afflicted by the Brittaines, then the Scots incroched into the heart of the Realme, and became the mightier and more populous, of vvhom the Countrey vvas ever since under one Generall name called Scotland.

Thus you see the Scotts a lively, stirring, ancient, & victorious people,<sup>o</sup> are mixed first of Brittaines, (though the Chronicles dissemble it) whom Brutus planted there with Albanactus: Secondly, of Picts: Thirdly and chiefly, of the Irish, which after this time left the name of Scott, for those in Brittaine, and delighted rather to be called Irish. Then came up the distinction of Scotia major for Ireland, and Scotia minor for the Scotts in Brittaine.

But most effectually (as saith Cambreensis) the Scotts prevayled under the guiding of six valiant Gentlemen, Sonnes to Muridus King of Vlster, who in the time that Neale the great enjoyed the monarchy of Ireland, going to succour their countrymen there, at last also tooke up for themselves no little portions of ground, which their posterity kept in Cambreensis time, the yeare of Christ 1200. who treateth their exploits more largely in his Topography of Ireland. Ever since then, they were utterly named and esteemed Scotts: <sup>p</sup> The nation of the Picts driven into corners, albeit the most parts & the out Isles retaine at this day a people <sup>q</sup> mungrell betwixt both, called Redshanks. The Scotts write that their King Gregorius, in an. Dom. 875. invaded Ireland as his lawfull inheritance, and the same conquered, who lieth buried in one of their out-Iles, called Iona, beautified with the Sepultures of Scottish Kings, where the Irish tongue is their native language, & therefore they call the submission of the Irish to Henry the 2. a defection from Scotland, which neverthelesse they recke, ne regard not, but willfully did forgoe it, as reaping lesse then they expended, and unable to defray the growing charge, which cost considered little better then nothing, say they, the King of England winneth by keeping of Ireland. Yet in the late governement of S. Henry Sidney, Ulster being conveyed by dissent, & act of Parliament to the Crowne, which Earledome was in the time of Edward the third reckoned at thirty one thousand markes yearely, the same being but one fift part of Ireland, It seemeth that if this right be well prosecuted that Ireland might pay it selfe of necessaries, and yeeld sufficient benefit to the Princes Coffers.

rity, many noble Clearkes flourishing in diverse Realmes, the Holy Doctor Augustine yet in life: Theodosius the second, suppressing Idols in all the Empyre: <sup>s</sup> Celestinus 1. Bishop of Rome, conferred with his cleargy touching the instruction specially of the vwestern parts, wherein the faith of Christ was hitherto, either not planted, or by persecution extinct, or by corruption of Hereticks defaced: of them all, no country was more lamented then Ireland, which partly for distance from the heart of Christendome, partly for their infinite rudenesse, had yet received no fruit of true Religion. In that assembly was Palladius Arch-Deacon of Rome, a good Priest and well learned, who profered his charitable travaile towards the conversion of any of those lands, whither he should be by them directed and appointed. The Pope knowing the sufficiency of the man, did consecrate Palladius a Bishop, <sup>t</sup> authorized his journey, furnished his wants, associated to him, diverse religious persons, delivered him the Holy Bible, with great solemnities, and certaine monuments of Peter and Paul, whereat diverse miracles had beene shewed. He arryved in the North of Ireland, whence he escaped hardly with his life, into the Islands adjoyning, there preaching and converting many, erecting monasteries, and ensueing his vocation so painfully, that the onely report of his holynesse and cunning, excited the Scotts (late christ-

In which attempt hee found such joyfull successe, so farre different from their accustomed frowardnesse, that a man would weene the Realme had beene reserved for him. And because it pleased God to worke to the Land such an universall benefite by the meanes of this holy Patriarch, I take it convenient to set downe briefly here his course of life, after the most approoved Chronicles that I could finde.

Patricius <sup>w</sup> was borne in the marches of England and Scotland, in a sea towne called then Taburnia, whose father Calphrune (as writeth Ioseline) was a Deacon and a Priests sonne, his mother Conches was sister to S. Martin, the famous Bishoppe of Toures in France. The childe was from his cradle brought up in the Faith, and much given to devotion.

This vvith the regard of his former education, printed in him such remorse and humility, that being from thenceforth utterly vveaned from the vworld, hee betooke himselfe to contemplation, ever lamenting the lacke of grace and truth in that Land, vvhatever not despairing, but that in continuance, some good might bee vvrought upon them, hee learned their tongue perfectly, and alluring one companion vvith him for his excercises, he departed thence into France, ever casting backe his eye to the conversion of Ireland, vvhose babes yet unborn, seemed to him in his dream (from out their mothers vvombes) to call for Christendome. In this purpose he sought out Martinus his Vnkle, by vvhose meanes the yong man entred under the government of Germanus then Bishop of Antisiodore, vvhose scholler and familiar he vvwas forty yeares, bestovving all that time in prayer and study of eloquence and holy Scriptures. Then at the age of threescore and two yeares, being renowned through the Latine Church for his wisdome, vertue, and skill, hee came home to Rome, recommended with letters from the French Bishops, to Pope Celestine, <sup>2</sup> to whom he uttered his full mind, and the secret vow which long since he had conceived touching Ireland. The Pope invested him Archbishop and Primate of the whole Iland, blessed him, commaunded publique prayer and fasting, brought him and his disciples onward on the voyage. Therefore in the twentie third yea of Theodosius the younger, which was the yea of our Lord 430. Patricke landed in Ireland: and because he spake the tongue plentifully, being a reverent personage, he tooke holy Bible, adding thereto diverse miracles in the Name & vertue of IESUS whom he preached: many listened unto him, namely such as in the late entertainement of Palladius and Albius the Irish Bishops his Disciples, had some little feeling in the Gospell. In continuance, hee wannte the better part of that Kingdome, except Laigirus himselfe sonne of Neale the great Monarch, who (notvvithstanding hee relied nothing to the Gospell yet) because hee stopped not the course thereof, nor forbid any that list to embrace it, the Bishop denounced to him a curse from God, accordingly tempered vvith mercy and judgement, that during his life hee should bee victorious, but after him, neither the Kingdome should stand, nor Thence hee journeyed vwith a great number of his Disciples and friends to Conill Lord of Connacht, (vwho honourably reputed him, and vwith all his people vvas converted) and then sent him to Logan his Brother, King of Leinster, vvhom hee likevvise persvvaded. In Mounster he vvas highly honoured of the Earle of Daris, vwho gave him a dwelling in the East angle of Ardmagh, called Secta, where hee erected many Celles and Monasteries, replenished with votarious men and women. Thirty yeares continually hee travailed in preaching through the Land, ever leaving behinde him Bishops and Priests, whose learning and holinesse by the speciall grace of God shortly repaired the faith so begunne, other thirty yeares hee spent in his Province of Ardmagh among his ghostly brethren, in visitation of those religious Houses, which by his meanes were founded, <sup>a</sup> so hee lived in the whole one hundred twentie two yeares, and lyeth buried in Downe.

CAP. XIII.

Of Saint Patrickes Purgatory.

EVERY History of Ireland that I have seene, maketh one severall title De mirabilibus Hiberniæ, and therein with long processe treateth of severall Islands, some full of Angels, some full of devils, some for male only, some for female, some where poore may live, some where none can dye: finally such effects of waters, stones, trees, and trinkets, that a man would vveene them to be but heedlesse and uncertainte tales by their complexion.

Verily, being inquisitive of these matters, I could finde no one of them soothed by such persons upon whose relation I am disposed to venture. Onely the place behinde Ardmagh called S. Patricks Purgatory, because it is knovvne and confessed, and because I vvould be discharged of my Readers expectation, who perhaps vwith the name of S. Patricke looketh to bee informed thereof, I can bee content to put so much in vwriting, as Bookes and reports affirme vwith most likelyhood.

Tvvo things I muse at, that neither the time nor the author of so strange erection was preserved. Concerning the time one Record putteth it in Anno Domini 302. which is 128. yeares before S. Patricke converted Ireland, and sixty sixe yeares before his birth. Againe Cambrensis who maketh curious recitall of wonders in the land, never uttereth word of this Purgatory; & though a negative authority be not invincible, yet considering the propertie of that man, and what a sort of trifles he taketh paine to justifie, it may serve for a vehement suspicion, that the place was then either not found, or not miraculous. Concerning the Author, very few there are that referre it to this Patricke their Apostle, but rather to an Abbot of the same name, whom I marvaile I finde not in the mighty bigge volume of their Saints: Notwithstanding these Originalls might bee either lost or altered, but the thing it selfe being extant, must needes have had a beginning, whereof possibly there are monuments in that Church, or in the Irish tongue to me unwitting.

Therefore I hold him unwise that will utterly mistrust the principall, because the circumstances vary; or condemne the vvhole, because he could not reach to the undoubted truth of some part. If any man bee so delicate, that not a jote thereof vwill sinke into his head, vwho shall controule him? neither hee nor vvee are bound to believe any story besides that vwhich is delivered us from the Scriptures, and the consent of Gods Church. Let the discreet Reader judge of it.

This I learne, that the holy Abbot Patricius secundus, not the Bishop their Apostle, laboured the conversion of the people of Ulster, vwhich being nowv Christians, could yet at no hand be vyonne to renounce their olde sensuality, cruelty, murthers, extortion. <sup>b</sup> And vwhen he much inforced the life to come, they replyed unto him vwith contempt, that unlesse they saw proofes of these loyes and paines hee preached, they vwould never leese possession of the pleasures in hand, for hope or dread of things to come they vvisit not vwhen. At their importunacie hee besought God, vvere it his good pleasure to give out some evident token of the maters they required: finally by the special direction of God he found in the north edge of Ulster a desolate angle hemmed in round, & in the mids thereof a pit, where he reared a Church, closed the same with a wall, bestowed therein Canons regular, at the East end of this Church yarde, a doore leadeth into a closet of stone, which they call the Purgatory, because devout people have resorted thither for penance; and reported at their returne, strange visions of paine and blisse appearing to them. They used to continue therein foure & twenty houres, which doing one while with ghostly meditations, and another while a dreadfull conscience of their deserts, they saw as they say, a plaine resembling of their owne faults and vertues, with the horror and comfort thereto belonging, that one so terrible, the other so joyous, that they verily deeme themselves for the time to have sight of heaven and hell. The revelations of men that went in (Saint Patricke yet living) are kept vwritten vwithin the saide Abbey. When any person is disposed to enter (for the doore is ever sparred) he repaireth first for advice to the Archbishop, vwho casteth all perils, and dissvvadeth him, because they say diverse never came backe againe, but if the party be resolute, he recommendeth him to the Pryor, vwho in like manner favourably exhorteth him not to hazard such a danger, if notwithstanding he finde the party fully bent, he conducteth him to this Church, enjoyed him to begin vvith prayer, fast and vigill of 15. dayes, so long together as in discretion can be endured. This time expir'd, if he yet persevere in his former purpose, the vvhole Convent accompanieth him vvith solemne procession and benediction to the mouth of the cave, vvhile they let him in, & so barre up the doore till the morrow, & then vvith like ceremonies they avvaite his returne, & reduce him to the Church. If he be seene no more, they fast & pray 15. dayes after. Touching the credit of those matters, I see no cause but a Christian man assuring himself that there is both hel & heaven, may vvhout vanity upon sufficient information, be persuaded that it might please God at somtime for considerations to his infinit vvisdome knovvn to reveale by miracles the vision of loyes & paines eternal, but that altogether in such sort, & so ordinarily, & to such persons, and by such meanes as the common fame & some records therof doe utter, I neither believe, nor wish to be regarded. It appeares by Trevisa in his additions to Polichronicon, that a superstitious opinion of this Purgatory was then conceived, which he disproveth. And a man of indifferent judgement may soone suspect that in the drift and strength of Imagination, a contemplative person would happely suppose the sight of many strange things which he never saw. Since writing hereof I met with a Priest, who told mee that he had gone the same pilgrimage, and affirmed the order of the premisses: But that he for his owne part saw no sight in the world, save onely fearefull dreames when he chanced to nod, and those he saith were exceeding horrible: further he added, that the faste is rated more or lesse, according to the quality of the penitent, and that the place seemed to him scarcely able to receive sixe persons.

CAP. XIII.

The Irish Saints

THOUGH my search thereof in this my haste out of the land be very cumbersome, yet being loath to neglect the memory of Gods friends, more glorious to a Realme then all the victories and triumphs of the world, I thinke it good to furnish out this chapter with some extracts touching the Saints of Ireland, namely those that are most notable, mentioned by authors of good credit. Cambreensis telleth, that in S. Patricks time flourished S. Bride the virgin, and S. Columbe in Doune, where their bodies soone after the conquest, and also S. Patrickes body were found, Sir John Courcye being then President of Ulster. In viewing of the sepulture hee testifieth to have seene three principall jewells, vvhich vvere then translated as honourable monuments vvorthe to be preserved.

Of S. Columbe<sup>c</sup> it is doubted, whether he lived in that age. Brigide was base Daughter of Dubtachus

a Captaine in Leinster, who perceiving the Mother with child, sold her secretly, fearing the jealousy of his wife, to a Irish Poet, reserving to himselfe, the fruite of her wombe, she was there delivered of this Brigide, whom the Poet trained up in letters, and so conveyed her home to her father.<sup>d</sup> The Damosell was schooled in the faith by S. Patricke, preaching then in those parts, she became so religious, and so ripe in judgement, that not onely the multitude, but a whole synode of Bishoppes assembled by Dublin,<sup>e</sup> used her advice in weighty causes, and highly esteemed her. One fact of hers being yet a childe, made her famous. The King of Leinster had given to Dubtachus in token of singular affection, for his good service, a rich sword. Now it befell, that the maiden visiting her sicke neighbours, diversly distressed for hunger, (her father being a sterne man, his Lady a shrewe) she saw none other helpe to releive these wretched people, but to part the Iewels of that idle sword among them. This matter was haynously taken, and came to the Kings eares, who (comming shortly after to a Banquet in her fathers house) demaunded the Girle, not yet nine yeares old, how she durst presume to deface the gift of a King, shee answered, that it was bestowed upon a better King, then hee was, whom (quoth she) finding in such extremity, I would have given all my father hath, and all that thou hast, yea your selves and all, were yee in my power to give, rather then Christ should starve.

At convenient age she professed virginity, and alured other noble Virgins to her fellowship, with whom she lived in her owne Monastery, untill the yeare of our Lord 500. and was buried at Downe, in the Tombe of S. Patricke, what Cambreensis reporteth of his own knowledge and sight, I will be bold to add hereunto.

Among her reliques, was found a concordance of the 4. Evangelists, seeming to bee written with no mortall hand, beautified with mysticall pictures in the margent, whose colours and workmanship, at the first blush were darke and unpleasent, but in the view wonderful liuely and artificiall. Senanus first a Souldiour, succeeded S. Patricke<sup>f</sup> in the See of Ardmagh, when he had beene certaine yeares a minor and doctour to the Campe. Brendan Abbot at the age of ten yeares, was of such incomparable holinesse, and thereto so wise and lettered, that his parents thinking themselves to have wonne the most notable fruite, that could ensue their marriage, by mutuall consent professed continencie. Hee flourished in the time of S. Bride, lived familiarly with Ercus the Bishop, and Finan the Abbot.

somer with the King of Temore,<sup>g</sup> and kept in his court with diverse yong-men his schoole-fellowes, openly adjured the King to suffer him and them to depart and serve God as they were accustomed, which being now sundred and distrayned of libertie they had partly discontinued, immedately they were dismissed: he died Bishop of Fernes, and laide the foundation of that Burrogh. Molingus the successor of S. Madoc being Bishop tooke himselfe to voluntary labour, & with his owne hands, drived a running spring to his Monastery, enduring that travaile dayly after prayer and study, eight yeares together. Fintan the Abbot was had in such veneration, that whereas Colm King of Leinster, kept prisoner Cormak the Kings sonne of Kensill: He went boldly with 12. of his Disciples through the presse of the Souldiours, and in sight of the King, rescued the young Prince, for the Irish in no wayes are outragious against holy men. I remember, Cambreensis writeth himselfe, merrily to have objected to Morris then Archbishop of Cashell, that Ireland in so many hundred yeares had not brought forth one Martyr. The Bishop answered pleasantly, (but alluding to the late murther of Thomas of Canterbury,) Our people (quoth he) notwithstanding their other enormities yet have ever more spared the bloode of Saints, marry now we are delivered to such a nation, that is well acquainted with making Martyrs, henceforwards I trust this complaint shall cease.

Malachias was borne in Ardmagh of noble parents,<sup>h</sup> cherished in vertue by example of his Mother, and trayned up in learning, even yet a very babe, he vvas oft times espied to steale from his companions to pray in secret, so grave & modest, that of himselfe he choosed alwayes the most severe and rigorous Schoole-masters, and refused an excellent Clerke, only because he saw him, somewhat lightly demeaned at game. In the beginning of his youth hee yeelded himselfe the Disciple of Imarius,<sup>i</sup> an old recluse, whose austerity of conversation, the whole towne admired. There he became a Deacon, and at twenty five yeares a Priest. The Archbishop for the fame and opinion of his worthinesse, made him his Coadjutor, in the which office he reformed superstitions and revived the strength of religion, specially the uniformitie of their Church service, wherein before time they jarred. The famous monastery of Banchor he reedified, of the patrimony & legacies by his Vnkle left him. The same Monastery was of old time, first governed by Congellos, and then proceeded Columbanus, the father of many religious houses in France. Banchor had beene so stored with Moncks, that no houre of day nor night they ceased, but some company or other was in continuall succession at divine service. Of which brethren there were in one day murthred 900. and the place spoyled, whose possessions conveyed to Malachias by his Vnkle, hee restored forthwith, and bettered the foundation. At the age of thirtie yeares, he was by Canonicall election forced to accept the Bishopricke of Conereth, a people of all the Irish then most savage and bestiall, whom he with inestimable toyle reclaymed.

In the meane while died Celsus Archbishop of Ard-magh, to whom succeeded Malachias, at the age of thirty eight years. But ere this wel-nigh the space of 200. yeares together, a pestilent custome had crept into the country, that the Metropolitanes See, was inferred upon meere lay persons of the blood royall in manner by inheritance, wherefore Nigellus the next of kindred animated by the partiality of some Princes, & getting into his custody the Bible and Staffe, and other Ornaments of S. Patricke (whereunto the eares of the common people tyed the prelacy) came to the Pallace, with a bande of Souldiours to have slaine the Bishop. When all the people wept and howled, for his perill, he alone stepped into the bosome of his enemies, demaunding their purpose. The very Tyrants letting fall their weapons in stead of the murder conspired, fell to reverence him, and departed friends. Three yeares he sate in the primacy, rather to discontinue the horrible corruption before used, then with intent to abide there: and their error having disanulled the abuse, he procured Gelasius to be his Successor, and returned to his former Bishopricke of Downe. For to Downe was then annexed Coner. But Malachias understanding that in times past, they were severall, sundred them againe, and preferred another to the Diocesse of Coner, desirous rather to discharge his cure, then to enlarge the fruites, while he preached, a woman fell at his feete, and besought his prayer, for that she had now gone with childe fifteene moneths and twenty dayes, nor could by any meanes be delivered, which done, the newes of her delivery was reported before the assembly brake up. Hee threatned vengeance to a Captaine, unlesse he would turne away the Concubine he kept, the same being also his brothers Concubine. The Captaine tooke it disdainefully, and within one houre, was slaine by a conspiracy of women, whose Daughters and servants he had defiled. There dwelt in Lismore a notable Clerke, of conversation upright, but corrupt in judgement of religion, this fellow advancing his doctrine, offered disputation to the Bishop, before the multitude, when he was forced to silence with the waight of truth, yet he cavilled maliciously, that not the cause nor learning, but the countenance and credit of Malachias had wonne the victory. To whom the Bishop answered, our Lord compell thee, even maugre thine owne willfullnesse to acknowledge thine errors. At these words the Clerke and intending to fly the sight of men, was prevented with a mortall infirmity, and beseeching the Bishop of his peace and communion, died immedately, reconciled to God and holy Church. Being demaunded of his Brethren, the Moncks of Banchor, where and when hee would wish to dye, and be buryed, if it lay in his choyse, hee answered: If in Ireland, beside the body of S. Patricke: If beyond the seas, at Clarivall, where S. Bernard was then famous and in the feast of All Soules. He cast in his minde, within a few dayes to sue to Eugenius the third, for the increase of the number of Metropolitanes, which request, was shortly after sped, and in this voyage he rested at Clarivall, and there diverse times, openly foretold that his yeare of departing was come: accordingly when he had taken leave of S. Bernard and the brethren, descended from his chamber to Church, and received the rites of a christian man, he returned to his lodging, and dyed on All Soules day,<sup>k</sup> in the yeare of his age fifty foure, so mildely and peaceably, that it seemed rather a sleepe, then a death. There his obsequies was solemnized and miracles wrought at his tombe, and from thence his body was translated to Ardmagh in the yeare 1192.

Malchus, though borne Irish, yet he spent most part of his time in the monastery of Winchester, in England, from thence assumed Bishop of Lismore, him also remembreth S. Bernard upon occasion. A lunaticke childe he cured in Bishopping him. This miracle was through the world seene and confessed of many hundreds. There happened the same time, a discord betweene the King of Mounster, and his Brother, wherein the King was overmatched and fled into England, visited Malchus in his Abbey, and would at no hand be said nay, but so long as it should please

God to afflict him, he would live there under his government, and ensue his conversation, he contented himselfe with a poore Cell, used dayly a cold bathe to represse the wantonnesse of his flesh, dieted himselfe with none other fare, then bread, water and salt, passed dayes and nights in sobbing and remorse of sinne. At length the Kings and Nobles of Ireland began to stomacke the usurper, vanquished him, called home the good King to his right, who with many persuasions of Malchas and Malachias could scarcely be gotten to forsake ghostly company, & trade of life.

CAP. XV.

The most notable events in Ireland, betweene the time of Saint Patricke, and the conquest under Henry the 2.

IN the yeare of Christ 586. the people of Norway were Lordes and victours of the Ilandes in the West Ocean called Orchades, and great scowrers of the seas: A nation desperate in attempting the conquest of other Realmes: as being sure to finde warmer dwelling any where, then at their owne home. These fellowes lighted into Ireland by this meanes, Careticus King of Brittaine (odious to his subjects) fell with them at civill warre. Ioyfull was the newes hereof to the Saxons, who then in the six severall kingdomes, possessed the Iland sundry wayes, so they laide together their force, & associated to them Gurmondus, a Rover out of Norway, who having a navy still in a readinesse, and an army thereafter furnished, holpe the Saxons, to hunt the Brittaines into the marshes of Wales, builded the towne of Gormond-chester, and then having holpen the Saxons, made a voyage into Ireland where he sped but meanely, and therefore the Irish account not this for any of their conquests, as some of their antiquities have informed me. The same Gurmondus finding hard successe, did but build a few slight castles and trenches in the frontiers, and then leaving the land, got him home into France, where he was finally slaine, him our Chonicles name King of Ireland. But the Irish affirme that before Turgesius no Easterlings obtained a Kingdome. Here Cambreensis to salve the contradiction, thinketh Gurmundus to have conquered the land by Turgesius his Deputy, sent thither at his provision, which answere breedeth a contrariety more incurable, for himself numbreth betweene Laigirius King of Ireland, in an. 430. and Fedlemidius whom Turgesius vanquished, Monarchs 33. and yeares 400. so that Turgesius lived in an 830. and could not possibly deale with Gurmondus, who joyned with the Saxons against Careticus in Anno 586. This knot might be untwyned with more facility. Gurmondus made much of that little he caught, and wrote himselfe King, which Title our Histories doe allow him, because he opened a gappe, enjoyed it for a while, and brake a way for his Countreymen. Turgesius brought this attempt to perfection, and in these respects each of them may be called first King and Conqueror.

Secondly therefore Turgesius with his Normans, assaulted Ireland,<sup>1</sup> sustained losse and many overthrowes, but in the end fastening his power to the sea coasts, and receiving in his friends at will, he subdued the land through and through, ever as he went building up Castles and fortresses, vvhervvith the Irish had not beene yet acquainted, for hitherto they knew no fence, but vwoods or bogges, or strokes. Turgesius bridled the Kings, and avved them so, that vwithout interruption he raigned thirty yeares, cryed havocke & spoile vwhere any vwealth vvas heaped, spared neither Lay nor Clergy, nor Church, nor Chappell, but very insolently abused his victory. O-malaghlien king of Meth, vvas in some trust vwith the Tyrant, his onely Daughter Turgesius craved for his concubine. The father having a present vvitt, and vwatching some subtle oportunities, Saving your fancie, my Lord, quoth hee, there are diverse Ladies of my bloud svveeter bed-fellowves for a king, then that brovvne girle; and then he began to count neeces and cousins a number forsooth, endovved vwith angell-like beauties, painted so lively vwith his Tale, that the Tyrant doted already upon them ere hee savv them: But ever he doubted, lest O-malaghlien extolled them to exempt his ovvne, and the vvise father cloaked his drift vwith modestie in ansvveres, and linging his graunt to enflame the leachers folly, as hee that vwould any thing to bee suspected rather then his thought indeed. And at the last vwhen the other tooke his delay somewhat unkindely, and bade his Queene speake to him. If I said (quoth hee) that vwith my very goodvwill my sole daughter should bee sent to you to bee deflovred, your high vvisedome vwould guesse I did but faine and flatter, and yet if ten daughters were deerer unto me then your good pleasure and contentation, by whose bounty, both she & I, and we all are supported, I were unworthie the secret friendship, wherein it lyeth in you to use mee. As for the wench, it will in part seeme honourable to bee asked to the bed of such a Prince, seeing Queenes have not sticked to come from farre, and prostrate their bodies to noble Conquerours, in hope of issue by them, and howsoever it bee taken, time will redeeme it. But such a friend as you are to mee and mine, neither I nor mine shall live to see, and I purpose not to offend your amity with saving a greater mater then twenty maiden-heads, seeing fathers have not sticked to yeeld their owne wives to quench the loves and lustes of their sonnes.

Therefore I am thus agreed, name you the day and place, sever your selfe from the open eye of your Court, conferre with those that have a curious insight and skill in beauties, I will send you my daughter, and with her the choice of twelve or sixteene gentlewomen, the meanest whereof may bee an Empresse in comparison, when all are before you, make your game at will, and then if my childe shall please your fancie, shee is not too good to be at your commandement: Onely my request is, that if any other presume upon your leavings, your Majestie will remember whose fathers childe shee is. This liberall proffer was accepted of him, whose desire was insatiable, with many faire promises and thankes. To bee short, the same day O-malaghlien attired Princelike his owne Daughter, and with her sixteene beautifull striplings, which presented to the King in his privy Chamber, accompanied onely with certaine wantons of the Nobility, drew foorth from under their woman-like garments, their skeanes, and valiantly bestirred themselves, stabbing first the Tyrant, next the youth present that prepared but small resistance, surely fitt mates to supply the office they tooke in hand, of Paris, not of Hector.

Out flew the fame thereof into all quarters of Ireland, and the Princes nothing dull to catche holde of such advantage, vwith one assent, rose ready to pursue their liberty. All Meth and Leinster vvere soone gathered to O-malaghlien, the father of this practise, vwho lightly leapt to horse, and commaunding their forvwardnesse in so naturall a quarrell, sayde, Lordings and friendes, this case neither admitteth delay, nor asketh policie, heart and haste is all in all, vwhile the feate is young and strong, that of our eneинies some sleepe, some sorrovv, some curse, some consult, all dismayed, let us anticipate their furye, dismember their force, cut off their flight, occupie their places of refuge and succour. It is no mastery to plucke their feathers, but their neckes, nor to chase them in, but to rovvse them out, to vveede them, not to rake them; nor to treade them dovvne, but to digge them up. This lesson the Tyrant himselfe hath taught mee, I once demaunded him in a parable, by vwhat good husbandry the Land might bee ridde of certaine Crovves that annoyed it, hee advised to vvatche vvhere they bred, and to fire the nestes about their eares. Goe vvee then upon these Cormorants that shrovvd themselves in our possessions, and let us destroy them so, that neither nest, nor roote, nor seede, nor stalke, nor stubbe may remaine of this ungracious generation.

Scarce had he spoken the vvord, but vwith great shovvtes and clamours, they extolled the King as patron of their lives and families, assured both courage and expedition, joyned their confederates, and vwith a running campe, svvept every corner of the Land, razed the castles to the ground, & chased the strangers before them, slevv all that abode the battaile, recovered each man his ovne precinct and former state of government. The Irish delivered of slavery, fell to their old vomit in persecuting one another, & having lately defaced their fortified castles & tovns, as coverts to the enemy; al sides lay novv more open in harmes vvay. This considered, the Princes that in the late rule of Turgesius espied some towardnesse to wealth and ease, began to discourse the madnesse of their fathers, who could not see the use of that vwhich their enemies abused, they began to loathe their unquietnesse, to wish either lesse discord, or more strength in every mans dominion to cast out the danger of naked Territoryes, as ready to call in the enemy, as the contrary was to shrowd them, faine vwould they mend, and they vvisit not hovv. The former subjection though it seemed intollerable, yet they felt therein a grovving to peace, fruits of merchandize, rest & surety; for it fared diversly tvvixt those Easterlings, & these Irish: they knevv hovv to thrive, might they get some commodious soyle. These had all the commodities of the soyle, & reckoned them not. While the Princes and Potentates pavved in this good mood, certain merchants out of Norvvay, called Ostomanni, Easterlings, because they lay East in respect of us, though they are indeede properly Normans, & partly Saxons, obtained licence safely to land & utter their vwares. By exchanging of vwares & money, finding the Normans civill and tractable, delighted also vwith gay conceipts, vwhich they never esteemed needfull untill they savv them, they entred into a desire of traffique vwith other nations, to allure merchants, they licenced the strangers aforesaid to build, if they vvere disposed, Haven-Tovvnes, vwhich vvas done. Amellanuſ founded Waterford; Sitaricus, Limericke; Inorus, Dublin, more at leisure by others. Then were repaired by helpe and counsell of these men, castles, forts, steeples, and Churches every-where. Thus are the Irish blended also in the blood of the Normans, who from thenceforth continually flocked hither, did the Inhabitants great pleasure, lived obediently, till wealth made them wanton and rebellious. But they could not possibly have held out, had not the conquest ensuing determined both their contentions. The meane while they waxed Lords of Havens and Bur-Townes, housed their soul-diours, and oftentimes skirmished tooke their fortune, crept no higher, onely a memory is left of their field in Clantarfe,<sup>m</sup> where diverse noble Irish men were slayne, that lye buryed before the Crosse of Kilmaynam.

And it is to be noted, that these are the Danes, which people (then Pagans) wasted England, and after that, France. From whence they came againe into England with WWilliam the Conquerour.<sup>n</sup> So that Ostomani, Normans, Easterlings, Danes, and Norway-men are in effect the same, and as it appeareth by conference of times and Chronicles, much about one time or season, vexed the French men, subdued the English, and multiplyed in Ireland.<sup>o</sup> But in the yeare of CHRIST 1095. perceiving great envy to lurke in the distinction of Easterlings and Irishe utterly west, and because they were simply Northerne, not Easterne, and because they magnified themselves in the late conquest of their Countreymen, who from Normandy flourished now in the Realme of England, they would in any wise bee called and counted Normans.

Long before this time, p as ye have heard, Ireland vvas bestowed into tvvo principall Kingdomes, and sometime into more, whereof one was ever elected Monarch, whom they tearme in their Histories, maximum regem, or without addition, regem Hiberniæ. The rest were written Reguli or Reges by limitation, as the King of Leinster, of Connaght, of Ulster, of Munster, of Meth. To the Monarch besides his allowance of ground, and titles of Honours, and other priviledges in Iurisdiction, was graunted a negative in the nomination of Bishops at every vacation. The Cleargy and Laity of the Diocesse, recommended him to their King, the King to their Monarch, the Monarch to the Archbishop of Canterbury, for that as yet the Metropolitanes of Ireland had not receaved their palles: In this sort was nominated to the Bishopricke of Divelin, then voide Anno 1074. (at the petition of Godericus King of Leinster, by sufferance of the cleargy & people there, with the consent of Terdilvachus the Monarch) a learned prelate called Patricius: who the blessed archbishop Lanfrancus consecrated at S. Pauls Church in London, & swore him to the obedience after the maner of his antecessors.<sup>q</sup> Christian Bishop of Lismore Legate to Eugenius 3. summoned a Provinciall Counsell in Ireland, wherein were authorized foure Metropolitan Sees, Ardmagh, Dublin, Cashell, & Tuam: Bishops thereof being Gelasius, Gregorius, Donatus, Edanus; for hitherto, though they yeelded a primacy to the Bishop of Ardmagh, in reverence of Saint Patricke, yet was it partly voluntary, and ratified rather by custome, then by sufficient decree: neither did that Arch-Bishop take upon him to invest other Bishops, but sent them to Canterbury (as I said before) which henceforth they did not. Namely the next Bishop of S. Laurence, sometimes Abbot of S. Kevynes in Glan-dilagh, <sup>r</sup> was ordered and installed at home by Gelasius Primate of Ardmagh.

CAP. I.

The conquest of Ireland by Henry the second, King of England, commonly called Henry Fitz Empresse.

DERMOT MACMURROUGH,<sup>s</sup> King of Leinster, halt and leacherous, vowed dishonestly to serve his lust on the beautifull Queene of Meath, and in the absence of her husband, allured the woman so farre, that she condescended to be stolne away. This dishonourable wrong to avenge, O-Rorick the King her husband, besought assistance of Rodericke Oconor, King of Connacht, at that season the generall Monarch of all Ireland. The subjects of Leinster detesting the quarrell, and long ere this time hating their Prince, left him desolate * 1167. This Chapter concludeth the 1. and 2. booke Cambrens de conquest Hiberniæ: delivered unto me by Francis Agard.

in his greatest neede, so as with much difficulty he caught his boate, and fled over for succour to Henry the 2. King of England, then warring upon the French men, within his Dukedom of Aquitaine. Somewhat before this season sate in the See of Rome, Adrianus t 4. an English man borne, who having in his youth taken a painefull pilgrimage into Norway, and reduced the whole Iland unto Christianity, learned distinctly the state of Ireland, and how their countrymen which dayly repaired thither, being themselves the most part infidels, meeting with a people there, wilde and furious, were like very shortly (but if God found remedy) to deface religion: for though Christ were beleaved and taught, yet the multitude eft soone, grew to a shamelesse kinde of liberty, making no more of necessary points of Doctrine, then served their loose humour. Besides these occasions Henry the 2. builded upon the Popes favour, his borne subject, had sent Ambassadours to Rome, in the first yeare of his raigne, asking leaue to attempt the conquest of Ireland. Adrian trusting and requiring a diligent reformation of the premisses, graunted his Bull, which Alexander his Successour confirmed, and ratified upon the same conditions. Now when Dermot was come in the very necke of these consultations, and put up his complaint, wherein he preferred the interest of his Crowne, and craved a restitution of some peece of his lands, the matter did seeme not all untowardly broached, Henry having his hands full with the French, because Mac Murrough urged all possible haste, could not personally intend that offer, but sent him honourably garded into England, with letters patents bearing this Tenour.

HENRY the second, King of England, Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine, Earle of Angiow. To all our true subjects, English, Normans, Welchmen, Scotts, and to all nations within our Dominions whatsoever. Greeting. Witt yee that the Bearer hereof, Dermot Mac Murrough King of Leinster, we have received into the soveraigne protection of our Grace and bounty, wherefore who so of you all our loving subjects will extend towards him, your ayde for his restoring, as to our trusty and welbeloved, know yee that he is thereto authorized by these presents, and shall deserve at our hands high favour in so doing.

With these letters and many gay additions of his owne, he arrived at Bristow, where he fell at conference with Richard Strongbow, Earle of Pembroke, with whom he covenanted, the delivery of his onely daughter and heire unto marriage, and so the remainder of his Kingdome: If the said Earle would recover him his home. That day were planted in Wales two gentlemen, Robert Fitz Stephens and Maurice Fitz Gerald, brethren of a Mother, allyed to Rice ap Griffin, then Prince of Wales, whose Grand-father was surnamed Rice the great. Fitz Stephens had beene high Constable there under the King, and for executing rigour upon the Princes servants, was with him detained prisoner three yeares, ne would in any wise pay ransome or accept the liberty promised him, but if the conditions were loyall to the Crowne, and to his person no dis-worship. Lastly by the mediation of David Bishop of S. Davids, the third brother; and of Fitz Gerald, and at the instance of Mac Murrough whom the Prince entertained in that distresse, Fitz Stephens was conditionaly delivered, that he and his brother Maurice, should the next spring, while Strongbow provided his army, assist the Irish out-cast, who in consideration thereof assured them an estate for ever in the towne of Wexford, and two Cantreds adjoyning.

Thus much firmly concluded on all sides, the King stale secretly home, and wintered closely among the Cleargie of Fernes.

According to covenant came Fitz Stephens, with 30. Knights of his blood, 60. Squiers, & 300. footemen Archers, to whom at his landing, Dermot sent in aid his base sonne Duvelnaldus, and five hundred speares. The towne and suburbs of Wexford marched forth against him: But when they saw Souldiours in array, diversly dighted and weaponed, furnished with artillery, barbed horses and harnesse, they retyred to their walles and strengthned them, burning the villages thereabouts, and all the provision they could not carry. The assault lasted 3. dayes, in the 4. certaine Bishops rescant there, tooke up the variance, pacified the Townesmen to their King, and procured the rendring of the Towne. Dermot having tryed the valiantnes of the Welchmen, immediately kept his touch, and gave possession of Weixford with the appurtenances aforesaid, to Fitz Stephens and his brother. After successe of these matters, they leavyed to the number of 3000. Souldiours, and devised to vexe the Lords of Vpper Ossory, who had beene to the King of all other most cruell and injurious. Them they compelled to deliver Trewage and sweare fealty.

Rodericke the monarch appalled at these newes, reared up all the Kings, in defence of the land, verily supposing that all would to wrecke, were it not prevented. And first they directed courteous messages and gifts to Fitz Stephens, moving him to depart the land quietly, and not to molest them without cause. To whom he answered, that much he wondred at the folly of those Princes, who to satisfie their choller had opened such a gappe to their owne prejudice, as though the subjects whom they had schooled, to breake alliance towards the King of Leinster, would not be as ready by this example to learne to withstand the King of Connaght, for his owne part, though hee might with better reason invade strangers, then they could expell their neighbours and their peere, yet would they suffer the King to reenter his right, they should not finde him stiffe, nor untractable, otherwise they should well feele that the Bryttons wanted neither abilitie, nor truth, to maintaine their word.

Rodericke perceived it was no boote to spurne, and therefore bethought himselfe of composition upon agreement, they resolved thus.

In primis, that Mac Murrough swearing afresh his obedience to the Monarch, should quietly, reposesse the parts of Leinster, which Rodericke with-held by suspension.

Secondly, that for ensurance thereof, he should pledge his dearest base sonne Cnotharn, to whom Rodericke promised his daughter, if this peace were found effectuall.

Thirdly, that being rested in his kingdome, he should discharge the Welch army, nor should hence-forwards call them over in defence.

About this time, Donatus the good King of Ergall, founded the Abbey of Mellyfont, which is the eldest that I finde recorded since the Danes arrivall, except S. Mary Abbey, besides Divelin, erected in an. 948.

The meane while was landed at Weixford, Maurice Fitz Gerald with his provision, ten Knights, thirty Squiers, and an hundred Bowmen, hereupon Dermot and the two Brethren, set their force against Divelin, which being the cheife Citty of his Realme, refused to yeeld, when Divelin and the country about it vvas recover'd, there befell hostility between Rodericke, and Duvenaldus Prince of Limericke, vvhom Dermot his father holpe in field, foyled the enemy, and then vwithdrevv his obedience from the Monarch. Shamefull was Roderickes flight, and Dermot insinuated into the favour of his people, began to recount the confederates of his first misfortune, and consulted with the two Captaines for the invasion of Connagh, finding them prest, he wrote over to the Earle Strongbow, renewed their covenants, prayed his helpe. Richard Earle Strongbow (whose auncestors came in vwith the Conquest, but commonly of the King and his successors disfavoured) having read the letters, he passed to King Henry, besought him either to answere him his rightfull heritage, vwhich other men occupied, or to licence him else vwhere in uncouth lands, to seeke his fortune. The King halfe in derision bad him on in the name of God, even as farre as his feete could beare him. The Earle dissembling to perceive the holovvnes of the king, furnished his Cousin Reymond le Grose, Nephevv to the brethren aforesaid, vwith ten Knights, and 70. Bovvmen, himselfe ensued vwith about 200. Knights, and 1000. lusty Welchmen, tryed Souldiours, shortly they vvanne the City of Waterford, and then immediately Mac Murrough accomplished his convention, gave to the Earle in marriage his daughter Eve, with the succession of his Kingdome. When Waterford was gotten, and Leinster pacified, and the Princes of Ossory tamed, and a chosen band ever in garrison, Mac Murrough became so terrible, that none durst encounter him. The Cleargy assembled themselves at Ardmagh, and with one accord did protest that for all their sinnes, and especially for the Turkish kinde of Tyrany which they used in buying and selling, and with vile slaveries oppressing the bodies of the English, (whom their pyrats tooke) their land was like to be translated to that nation, whose captives they handled so cruelly. To appease in part, the indignation of God, they decreed, that all English, wheresoever in hold within the realme, should forthwith be loosed, Further, if it pleased God to scourge them, it should be meekely suffered, as farre beneath the debt of their deserts. King Henry, though he was well apayed that the Earle should be from him, yet he liked no deale, his growing in Ireland to such power, as percase in time to come, with his faction in Wales, then living under a Prince of their owne, he might be able to face the Crowne of England. An edict was therefore drawne, whereby all subjects were charged upon their perill, to reverte into England by a day, and a caveat annexed, that upon paine of death, none should presume to passe over without a nevv warrant, nor ship over any wares, money, munition, or victuals into Ireland.

Thus had the Irish a breathing space, and would perhaps have picked greater benefits thereby, had not the Normans beene in their top immediately after.<sup>u</sup> Great force they laide to Divelin, but vvere valiantly repelled, and their Captaine Hasculphus taken prisoner, who being calmly intreated, began to overview himselfe, and to imagine that the Citizens durst not use him extreamely, & once in open audience brake forth his unseasonable courage, in these wordes. Take this (quoth he) but for hansell, the game is to come: which heard they delayed him no longer, but pusht him downe on a blocke, and swapped off his head.

Strongbow perceiving the Kings jealously not yet allayed, having wel-nigh spent his army in defence of diverse good townes, impugned by Rodericke and the Irish, left sufficient warde till his returne: and met the King at Gloucester. <sup>v</sup> To whom he writeth, declaring the envy that lurked in his preferment, yeelded the tittle of all his winning, craved good countenance with his grace, contented himselfe with any portion whatsoever his Majesty should relinquish: a finall quietnesse was driven betweene them, Dublin with th' appurtenances, and all port townes of Leinster, & all fortresses reserved to the King. The Earle should enjoy with good leave whatsoever he had gotten beside. This yeare dyed Mac Murrow, and the Abbey de Castro Dei was founded.

Soone after the King with five hundred Knights with archers and horsemen many more tooke shore at Waterford,<sup>w</sup> and was such a terrour to the Irish, that incontinently all Mounster submitted themselves to his peace. There the men of Wexford to feede the surmises of Henry conceived against the gentlemen, betrayed their Lord Fitz Stephens, and him delivered to the King. The King to gratifie them, for a while tremely chained and hampered the prisoner, quarrelling with him, notwithstanding the inhibition he had proceeded in atchieving the conquest of Ireland, but shortly hee enlarged him, and ratified the grants of Wexford above-mentioned.

These Princes of the South sware fidelity and tribute to Henry. Dermot Cartye King of Corke, Donald Obrene king of Limericke, Donald and Omalaghlien, puissant Lords of Ossory, and in briefe, all the states of Mounster, from thence hee journeyed to Dublin, where in like manner all the Captaines of Leinster, and Ororicke king of Meth, and Rodericke Oconor, king of Connaght, and of all Ireland for himselfe, and the whole Iland, humbly recognized his soveraignety: finally, no man there was of name in the land (except them of Ulster) but they to him bowed and sware obeysance. All which he feasted royally with a dinner of Cranes flesh, a fowle till then utterly abhorred of the Irish.

Merlin had prophesied, that five should meeete, and the sixt should scourge them. This sixt they now construed to be Henry, in whom the five pettie Kingdomes were united. Of the same conquest prophesied their foure notable Saints, Patricke, Brachon, Colme, and Moling.<sup>x</sup>

The King not unmindfull of his charge, enjoyned by the Popes Adrian and Alexander, entred into a reformation of the Church: and mooved the famous Bishop of Lismore, Saint Christian, their Legate, to call a Synode at Cashell, wherein they defined Eight Articles.<sup>y</sup>

1. First, that their people should abandon unlawfull contracts of their cousins and allyes, and observe the Canons of Matrimonie.
2. That their Infants should be primestened of the Priests hand at the Church dore, and then baptized in the font of their mother Church.
3. That all faithfull duely pay their Tithes.
4. That holy Church be for ever quit of those cursed exactions of diet and harborow whereunto they had beene accustomably strayned foure seasons in the yeare, and else against right.
5. That the fine levyed for manslaughter, be not borne by the Clearkes, and kinsmen to the malefactour, but if he were accessory or faulty to the deed doing.

6. That the sicke doe his Testament to be made or read in the presence of credible persons.

7. That the funerals of the dead be devoutly and solemnly kept.

8. That forasmuch as GOD hath universally delivered them into the government of the English, they should in all points, rights, and ceremonies, accord with the Church of England.

To these things Gelasius Primate of Ardmagh, because he was old and impotent, gave his consent at Divelin in the presence of the King, he died two yeares after, so aged, that his sustenance was the milke of a white Cow, which he carried with him wheresoever he travelled. This yeere the Abbey de fonte vivo was founded.

While all went well in Ireland, newes came that Henry the sonne (whom his father had for good purpose crowned King of England) was misledde to intrude upon the actuall possession of the Crowne in his fathers life-time, which stirre to appease, the King left the custody of Ireland with Hugh de Lacy, to whom he gave Meth in fee, with Fitz Stephens, Fitz Gerald, and Philip de Bruise, and diverse others, and sayled into England.

In absence of King Henry, Ororick King of Meth, surnamed Monoculus, required conference and parley with Hugh de Lacy, in which communication the King had trayterously murdered Lacy, had not Fitz Gerald rescued him. Then stept out an ambushment of the Irish, but Griffin a Gentleman of the bloud royall in Wales, flighted the Kyrneghes, and slevv Ororick.

The English perceived such practices daylie sought and attempted, tooke from the Irish as farre as they durst, all trust of government, fenced themselves vwith garrisons, made Captaines, Keepers and Constables, vwheresoever they vvanne the better. But King Henry vvas so affrighted vwith his sonnes rebellion, and grevv into such envye both at home and abroad for the death of Thomas late Archbishop of Canterbury, that he had no vvill to mind his proceedings in Ireland. Ever his jealousie increased tovvardes the Earle Strongbow, vvhom he supposed easie to bee carryed avvay vwith any light occasion of tumult. The Earle vvas a man of great birth, but not of great port until this good marriage befell him, & knovving himselfe neither to be brooked in sight, nor trusted out of sight, kept still one certaine rate in all his doings, bare but lovve saile, fed no quarrells, shunned all suspicious conference.

While they stood thus in a mammaring, and Letters came daylie over, hovv faintly the States and Princes of Ireland performed obedience; for except in Leinster, all other parts retayned still their auncient kinde of government, and did onely acknowvledge Tribute. It vvas thought expedient by Henryes Counsellours, to discharge his minde of that care, and seeing there vvas trouble on all sides, and all could not bee intended one vway, they determined to venture the custody of Ireland to Strongbow, being likely for his ovne vvealthe and assurance, to procure all possible meanes of bridling and annoying the Irish.

No sooner vvas the Earle landed with his Commission Lord Warden of Ireland, but Donald King of Limericke met him at the vantage, and coursed him within the walls of Waterford, whereof hearing the residue their mates were animated, so that up they start in every corner, tagge and ragge to expell the English.

It went hardly, then the Earle remembred himselfe of his cousin Lord Reymond, left behinde him in Wales a suitor to Basil his sister, whose marriage nothing stopped but the Earles consent. Now therefore hee writeth lovingly to the Wooer, and upon condition that hee came speedily to succour him, hee yelded the Lady and all else at pleasure. Reymond in his first entry brake into Divelin, marryed his Wife in compleate Armour, and the very next daye sprang foorth, whipped the Rebels, quieted Leinster.

Also the Cleargy having lately perused the Popes

Bull, <sup>2</sup> wherein hee entitleth Henry Lord of Ireland, and under straight paynes commaundeth alleagiance unto him, busily repressed the fury of their Countrey-men. And forsomuch as immediately after Christianity planted there, the whole Iland had with one consent given themselves not only into the spirituall, but also into the temporall jurisdiction of the See of Rome, which temporall right the two Bishops Adrian and Alexander had freely derived into King Henry, as by their publique instruments read in their counsell at Cashell appeareth, they denounced curse and excommunication to any that would maliciously gainsay or frustrate the same.

When these broyles were rocked asleepe and husht for a time, the familiars of Strongbow greatly forethought them of the credit and rule committed to Reymond, whom in conclusion they procured home againe vwhen he had served their turne at neede. The meane vwhile dyed Strongbow, as some say, <sup>a</sup> betrayed and vwounded, he lyeth buried in the Body of Christ Church in Divelin, leaving behinde him one onely daughter Isabel, marryed after 14. yeares to William Earle marshall. Closely they concealed Strongbowes death, untill they had compassed from the King another Governour after their owne tooth. For ever they dreaded, that Reymond being in the Princes eye, and friended in the Court, would catch his opportunity, and wynde himselfe (might he get an inkling in time of the Earles death) into the succession of his office, which even then waxed sweet and savoury. Coodgellers of this drift, stopped messengers, intercepted letters, hasted on their owne course. Basil the wife of Reymond, more dutifull to her husband, then naturall to her brother, continued still in Ireland sicke, but having privy knowledge of those newes, ere the breath was quite out of the Earles body, payned her selfe to disturbe this whole array. And whereas shee knew well her letters should bee searched, and her owne servants stayed, shee let it be delivered at all a very venture to one of the maryners, and therein draweth a long processe of her affayres and household, but in the middle shuffles in a few lines of her meaning, under these tearmes: To all my afflictions is added now lately the tooth-ake, so that except that one master-tooth had fallen (which I send you for a token) I weene I were better out of my life. Now was the tooth tipped with golde, and burnished feately like a present, which Reymond wist well to bee none of hers, and therefore quickly smelled the construction, lingred not for Letters Pattents, but stept over presently, and made his packe, and was elected by the Kings Agents there, Lord Protectour of Ireland, till the Kings pleasure were further knowne: During his authority flourished the Geraldines, but shortly after they quayled againe, under the government of WWilliam Fitz Aldelin, with him was joyned in commission the valiant Knight John de Courcy, conquerour, and

Earle of Ulster, which hitherto the King had not obtained.

That yeare <sup>b</sup> was founded the Abbey of Crockesden, by Bertramus de Verdon.

To establish the conquest of Ulster, and other victories of the parts of Ireland before enjoyed, <sup>c</sup> Alexander the third sent his Cardinall Vivianus, vwho declareth the Title that Henry held of the Pope, the reservation of the Peter-pence, the indignation of GOD and holy Church against the rebels, who beeing themselves contemners and breakers of Canons Ecclesiastical, yet for maintenance of their unruly stomackes, had found the meanes to make Churches their barnes, bestowing therein both corne and pulse, that the victuallers and purveyors of the Princes campe should not dare to require the sale thereof for perill of sacrilege. Therefore hee licenseth Officers in this behalfe soberly and discretely to convert such persons, as made the Church a Sanctuary for their Corne, and in neede to take thereof at reasonable prices.

Little good did Fitz Aldelin, and lesse vvas like to doe, because hee delighted to crosse his Peeres, and vvas of them stopped in his course of government.

the Land. But Miles Cogan, Philip de Bruise, Fitz Stephens, Power, and diverse other more preferred to severall countreyes under him.

This Lacye builded a sort of castles and forts throughout all Leinster and Meth, and the next sixe yeares continually devout gentlemen erected sundry Abbeyes, as the Abbey of Roseglasse, <sup>d</sup> of Donbrothy by Hervy a Welch-man, <sup>e</sup> one of the speciall conquerours of Ireland, vwho himself after that, entred into religion in Trinity Priory at Canterbury, <sup>f</sup> The Abbeys of Geripont, and Choro Benedicti, the Abbey de lege Dei, vwith repaying of many Chappels, Chauncells, Bell-houses, High-vvayes, and Bridges. <sup>g</sup> Then dyed Saint Laurence Archbishop of Divelin, to vvhom succeeded John Comyn an Englishman, brought up in the Abbey of Evesham, Founder of Saint Patrickes in Divelin, vvhich vvas before that time a Parish Church, & novv by the said Archbishop endovved with Prebends, Vicars, Clearkes, Chorists, and many notable possessions for their maintenance, vvhhereout from time to time have proceeded Clergy-men of greatest learning & reputation in the Diocese Divers contentions were raised betwixt Christs Church and it, for antiquity, wherein they of S. Patrickes, are (no doubt) inferiour, as shall appeare.<sup>h</sup> They are both written Cathedrall Churches, and both are the Bishops Chapiter, in vvhose election they both ought to convent within the Church of the blessed Trinity, called Christ's Church, which in all records hath the preheminency of place. The party that disturbeth this order of election, forfeiteth by deede to th' Archbishop of Divelin, 200. pounds. This foundation was much enriched by King John.

The same yeare died the yong King Henry, reconciled to his father, but preparing warre against his brother Richard Duke of Aquitain: soon after also deceased Jeffry his other son, Duke of Brittaine. Thus were left Richard, his inheritour, and John afterwards Earle of Gloucester, heretofore surnamed without land, to whom the father conveyed all his interest and Lordship of Ireland, sent him thither honourably accompanied, being then but twelue yeares old, and with him in speciall trust, Giraldus Cambrensis Clerke, a diligent searcher of the antiquities of Ireland, surely well learned, and in those dayes counted Eloquent.

About the young Earle were servants and counsellours, three sorts, first Normans, great quaffers, lourdens, proud, belly swaines, fed with extortion and bribery; to whom hee most relyed: secondly, the English brought with him, meetly bold: Thirdly, the English found in the land, whom being best worthy and most forward in all good services, hee least regarded, hereof sprang parties and disdaine, and to the knights that hardiest were and readiest of courage no small discomfor, to the enemies a spurre.

With the brute of his arrivall at Waterford, the Kings of Thomond, Desmond and Connaght, put themselves in the bravest manner they could, to meete him and to submit their countries to his Grace, before them came the Irish Franklyns with rich presents, (and as they are very kind hearted where they list to shew obedience,) made unto the Childe, their Lord, the most joy and gladnesse that might be, and though rudely, yet lovingly, and after the custome of their country, offred to kisse him, with such familiarity as they used towards their Princes at home. Two of the Guard, Normans, pickthankes, shooke and tare the Clownes by the glibs & beards unmannerly, and churlishly thrust them out of the presence, whom they should have instructed curteously, & born with. The Irish thus rejected, went against the fore-named Kings, opened the rebukes and villanyes done to them, for their meekenes, that their Lord whom they thought to honour, was but a Boy, peevish and insolent, governed by a sort of flatterers, younglings and prowlers: That sithence to them that buxome were and tractable, such despite and dishonour (that terme they have borrowed of the Spaniards) was proffered so soone, little good should the states of Ireland looke for in continuance, when the English had once yoked and penned them in their clouches.

This report lightly alienated the mindes of those Princes, not yet very resolute, and turned them home with great oathes and leagues, entred among themselves, caused also the mightiest Captaines elsewhere to sticke together, while their lives lasted, and for no manner earthly thing to slacke the defence of their auncient liberties.

Immediately walked abroad mutinyes of broyle & commotion, so that the young Earle and his army, were content to commit the tryall thereof, to Lacy, Bruise, Courcy, Fitz Gerald, and the rest, himselfe departing away the same yeare he came, and leaving the Realme a great deale worse bestedde then he found it.

From the Conquest hitherto Giraldus Cambrensis, and from hence to the yeare 1370. I am specially holpen by certaine briefe extracts,<sup>1</sup> whose author is namelesse, and therefore I quote him by the name of Philip Flatsbury who wrote them, and enriched them with collections of his owne, for Gerald the father of the Earle of Kildare then being. An. 1517.

Lacy the rather for these whisperings, did erect and edifie a number of Castles, well and substantially, provided in convenient places, one at Derwath, vvhile diverse Irish prayed to be set on worke, for hyre. Sundry times came Lacy to quicken his labourers, full glad to see them fall in ure with any such exercise, wherein, might they once be grounded & taste the svveetenesse of a true mans life, he thought it no small token of reformation to be hoped, for which cause he visited them often, and merrily would command his Gentlemen to give the labourers example in taking paines, to take their instruments in hand, and to worke a season, the poore soules looking on and resting. But this game ended Tragically, while each man was busie to try his cunning: some lading, some plaistering, some heaving, some carving; the Generall also himselfe, digging with a pykeaxe, a desperate villaine of them, he whose toole the Generall used, espying both his hands occupied and his body, with all force inclining to the blow, watched his stoope, and clove his head with an axe, little esteeming the torments that ensued.<sup>k</sup> This Lacy was conquerour of Meth, his body the two Archbishops, John of Divelin and Mathew of Cashell, buried in the monastery of Becktye, his head in S. Thomas abbey at Divelin.<sup>l</sup> The next yeare, was builded the abbey of Ines in Vlster,<sup>m</sup> and soone after, the abbeys of Iugo Dei, and of Comer,<sup>n</sup> and then the abbey of Knockmoy, or de Colle victoriæ, by<sup>o</sup> Cathel Cronderg King of Connacht.

CAP. II.

The Titles of the Crowne of England to every part of Ireland, and to the whole diverse wayes.

I WILL begin with the pedigree of WWilliam Earle marshall, for thereupon depend many recordes in Ireland, and the Queenes right to Leinster. WWalter Fitz Richard, who came from Normandy, with WWilliam Conquerour, died Lord Strongbow of Strigule alias Chepstow without issue, to whom succeeded his sisters sonne Gilbert, who was created the first Earle of Pembroke, & had issue Richard the inheritour of Leinster, by a covenant and marriage of Eva the sole daughter of Mac Murrough King of Leinster. This Richard conveyed to Henry the second all his title, and held of him the Lordship of Leinster in foure counties, Wexford, Catherlagh, Ossory, and Kildare. Richard left issue, a daughter Isabel, married to WWilliam Earle marshall of England, now Earle of Pembroke, Lord Strongbow, and Lord of Leinster. WWilliam had issue five sonnes, who died without issue, when every of them, except the youngest, had successively possessed their fathers lands, and five daughters, Maude, Ioane, Isabel, Sibil, and Eve, among whom the patrimony was parted in an. 31. H. 3. Of these daughters bestowed in marriage, are descended many noble houses, as the Mortimers, Bruises, Clares, &c.

borne subjects to the Crowne of England, paying ever to the King his dutyes reserved.

Hugh de Lacy Conquerour of Meth, had issue WWalter de Lacy, who held the same of King John, paying a fine of foure thousand marks sterlinc, and hence beganne all the severall claimes there at this day, with allegiance sworne and done by their auncestours.

At the very first arrivall of Henry the second, the Princes of Mounster came universally, and did homage voluntarily, and acknowledged to him and his heires, duties and payes for ever.

John de Courcy Conquerour and Earle of Ulster, dyed without issue, King John Lord of Ireland, gave the Earledome to Hugh de Lacy, who had issue, WWalter and Hugh, dead without issue, and one daughter married to Reymond Burke Conquerour and Lord of Connaght.

Connaght descended to diverse heires, owing service to the Prince, but Ulster is returned by devolution to the speciall inheritance and revenues of the Crowne of England, in this manner The said De Burgo, had issue, Richard, who had issue John, who had issue WWilliam, who was slaine without issue, and a Daughter, Elizabeth intytled to thirty thousand marks yearely, by the Earledome of Ulster, whom Edward the 3. gave in marriage to Leonel his second sonne, Duke of Clarence, who had issue a daughter Philippe, marryed to Edmund Mortymer, who had issue Edmund, Anne, Elinor. Edmund and Elinor died without issue, Anne was married to Richard, Earle of Cambridge, sonne to Edmund of Laugley Duke of Yorke, fift sonne to Edward the third, which said Richard had issue Richard Plantagenet, father to Edward the fourth, father to Elizabeth wife to Henry the seventh, and mother to Henry the eight, father to Mary, Edward the sixt, and Elizabeth.

Severall claimes to the Land of Ireland.

1. First that the Irish (for of the rest there is no question) were subjects to the Crowne of Brittaine, before they set foote in Ireland. Thus it appeareth. They dwelt on that side of Spaine, whereof Bayon was then cheife imperiall Citie, and the same then in possession and obedience to Gurguntius 376. yeares ere Christ was borne, as it was to his successours many a day after, namely to Henry, the which as I finde noted in certaine precepts of governement, dedicated to James Young, to James Butler Earle of Ormond, then Lieutenant of Ireland an. 1416.

From this coast and Citty, now part of Gascoigne came the fleete of those Iberians, who in 60. ships met Gurguntius on the sea, returning from the conquest of Denmarke, to whom they yeelded oath and service, sued for dwelling, were by him conducted and planted in Ireland, and became his leige people.

2. Mac Gil-murrow King of Ireland, with all his petty Princes, Lordes, and Captaines, summoned to King Arthurs court held in Carlion, an. 519. did accordingly their homage, and attended all the while his great feast and assembly lasted.

3. The Monarch of Ireland and all other, both reges and reguli for them and for theirs for ever, betooke themselves to Henry the second in an. Dom. 1172. namely those of the south, whiles he lay at Waterford, Dermot King of Corke, which is the nation of Mac Cartyes, at Cashell, Donald King of Limericke, which is the nation of the Obrenes, Donald King of Ossory, Mac Shaghlen King of Ophaly, at Divelin did the like, Okeruell king of Vriell, Ororicke king of Meth, Rodericke King of all Ireland, and of Connaght. This did they with consents and shoutes of their people: and king Henry returned without any Battle given. Only Ulster remained which John de Courcy soone after conquered, and Oneale Captaine of all the Irish there, came to Dublin to Richard the 2. in an. 1399. And freely bound himselfe by oath and great summes of money, to be true to the crowne of England.

4. The same time Obrene of Thomond, Oconor of Connaght, Arthur Mac Murrow of Leinster, and all the Irish Lords which had been somewhat disordered, renewed their obedience.

5. When Ireland first received Christendome they gave themselves into the jurisdiction both spirituall & temporall, of the See of Rome. The temporall Lordship, Pope Adrian conferred upon Henry the second, and hee gave the same to John his younger sonne, afterwards King of England, and so it returned home to the Crowne.

6. Alexander the 3. confirmed the gift of Adrian as in both their Charters is expressed at large.

7. Vivian the legate on the Popes behalfe doth accuse and excommunicate all those that flitte from the obeysance of the Kings of England.

8. The cleargy twice assembled, once at Cashell, secondly at Ardmagh, plainly determined the conquest to be lawfull, and threatned all people, under paine of Gods, and holy Churches indignation, to accept the English kings for their Lords, from time to time.

9. It would aske a volume to recite the names of such Irish Princes, who since the conquest have continually occasions, revolts or petitions, sworne truth and faith to the kings of England, from time to time, received honours, wages, fees, pardons, and petitions.

And thus I thinke no reasonable man will doubt of a right so old, so continued, so ratified, so many wayes confessed.

CAP. III.

Richard the first, and King John.

BY occasion of Lacyes mishap, John Courcye, and Hugh de Lacye the younger, with all their assistants, did streight execution upon the Rebells, and preventing every mischiefe ere it fell, stayed the Realme from uproares. <sup>p</sup> Thus they continued lovingly, and lived in wealth and honour all the dayes of Richard the first, untill the first yeare of King Johns raigne.

Henry the second had issue male, William, Henry, Richard, Jeffrey, and John. <sup>q</sup> William, Henry, and Richard dyed without issue. Jeffrey Earle of Brittaine dyed before his father, and left issue two daughters, and an after-borne son called Arthur, whose title to the Crowne, as being the undoubted lyne of the elder brother, Philip King of France, and certaine Lords of England and Ireland stoutly justified: Him had King John taken prisoner in Normandy, and dispatched, if the fame be true, with his owne hands at Roane. Of this barbarous cruelty all mens eares were full, and Courcye either of zeale or partiality, spake bloudy words against it, which meane his undermyners caught, and did not onely heave him out of credit, but also got commission to attach his body, and to send him into England.

The Earle mistrusted his part, and kept aloofe, till Hugh de Lacye Lord Justice, vvas faine to levye men in armes, and to invade Vlster.<sup>r</sup> Thence hee vvas often put to flight, vwhereupon hee proclaymed Courcye Traytour, and hyred sundry gentlemen vwith revvards, to bring him in quicke or dead, so long hee vvoed the matter, that Courcyes ovne Captaines vvere inveygled to betray their Lord. Therefore upon good Friday, vwhen the Earle did off his armour, and in secret meditations visited religious places bare-footed, they layde for him, tooke him as a rebell, and shipped him into England the next way, where he was adjudged to perpetuall prison.<sup>s</sup> Sentleger addeth in his collections that Lacy payd the Traytors their money, and then immediatly hanged them.

This Courcye translated the Church and Prebendaryes of the Trinity in Downe, to an Abbey of black Monks brought thither from Chester, and the same did hallow to S. Patricke, for which alteration of the name of God to his servant, hee deemed himselfe justly punished.

Not long after (as say the Irish) certaine French knights came to King Johns Court, and one of them asked the combat for tryal of the Dutchy of Normandy. It was not thought expedient to jeopard the title upon one mans lucke, yet the challenge they determined to answere: some friend put them in minde of the Earle imprisoned, a Warriour of noble courage, and in pitch of body like a gyant. King John demaunded Courcye whether hee would bee content to fight in his quarrell: Not for thee (said the Earle) whose person I esteeme not worthy the adventure of my bloud, but for the Crowne and dignity of the Realme, wherein many a good man liveth against thy will. The words were haply taken without dudgen, as proceeding from stomach, and from one counted more plaine then wise.

Courcye therefore being cherished to the field, and refreshed with dyet, fed so wonderfully after his hard keeping, that the French Challenger tooke him for a monster, and privily stale into Spaine. Then was the Earle inlarged, and crossed the seas tovvardes Ireland, fifteene times, evermore beaten back to the shoare, vvent thence into France to change the coast, and there dyed: after vvhose decease vwithout heires of his body, the Earldome of Ulster vvas entirely bestovved upon Hugh de Lacye for his good service.

In Ireland remained one of the Courcyes, Lord of Rathenny and Kilbarrock, vvhom as a spye of all their practises, and an informer thereof to the King, WWalter and Hugh the sonnes of Hugh had slaine, and great seditions raysed, bearing themselves after the decease of their father for Governours out of checke. To settle the Realme of Ireland, King John brought thither a maine Armye, banished the Lacyes, subdued the remanents, tooke pledges, punished malefactours, established the execution of English Lawes, coyned money of like value currant sterling in both Realmes. <sup>t</sup> The two Lacyes repentant of their follyes and tyran-nies, fled into France, dispoyled of sumptuous appa-rell, and unknowne, meekely they served in Saint Taurines Abbey, as gardners, untill the Abbot by their countenance and behaviour, beganne to smell their estates, and pressed them so farre, that they de-tected their offences, and the due desert of much harder chastisement, eft-soone beseeching the Abbot to keepe their counsells, who commending their humilitiess, yet advising them to laye holde upon their Princes favour, if it might be had, laboured the King his familiar and godsip earnestly for their pardons and obtained it.

Each of them were fined, WWalter at 4000. and Hugh at 2500. markes, and restored him to the Lordship of Meth, this to the Earldome of Ulster: King John made his Vice-gerent, and returned home, subdued the Welchmen, met with Pandulphus the Legate of Innocentius the third, who came to release him of the sentence wherein he stood excommunicate for his spoyle and extortion of Church goods, to whom being the Popes Atturney, hee made a personall surrender of both his Realmes in way of submission, and after his assoylement, received them againe: some adde that he gave away his Kingdome to the See of Rome, for him and his successors, recognizing, to holde the same of the Popes in fee, paying yearely therefore one thousand markes, and in them three hundred for Ireland. <sup>u</sup> Blundus sayth, Centum pro utroq; auri marchas. Sir Thomas Moore, a man in that calling & office likely to sound the matter to the depth, writeth precisely, that neither any such writing the Pope can shew, nor were it effectuall if he could. How farre foorth, and with what limitation a Prince may or may not addict his Realme feodary to another, John Maior a Scottish Chronicler, and a Sorbonist, not unlearned, partly scanneth, who thinketh 300. marks for Ireland a very hard pennyworth. The instrument which our English Chronicle <sup>v</sup> rehearseth, might haply be motioned and drawne, and then dye unratified, although the copy of that record continue: But certaine it is, that his successors never payde it, and thereto assenteth John Bale in his Apology against vowes.

* Fabian.

To John Comin Founder of S. Patrickes Church, succeeded Henry Lounders in the Archbishops See of Divelin,<sup>w</sup> who builded the kings Castle there, being Lord Chiefe Iustice of Ireland, him they nicknamed (as the Irish doe commonly give additions to their Governours in respect of some fact or qualitie) Scorch-villaine, and Burnebill, because hee required to peruse the writings of his Tenants, colourably pretending to learne the kinde of each mans severall tenure, and burned the same before their faces, causing them either to renew their estates, or to holde at will. In the fourth yeare of King Johns raigne, was founded the Abbey of Dowske, in the sixt, the Abbey of Wethny in the Countie of Limericke, by Theobald le Butler, Lord of the Carricke; and in the twefth, Richard Tute builded the Monastery of Granard.

CAP. IIII.

Henry the third, and Edward the first.

AFTER the death of Lownders,<sup>x</sup> Henry the third (informed of the Truth and good service done by the Geraldines ever since their first arryvall in the Country) made Morrice Fitz Gerald the sonne of Morrice aforesaid Lord Iustice.

To him sent Edward the Prince, surnamed Long-shanke, for assistance and power of men against the Welch Rebells, who leaving Warders in the Castle of Sligaghe, by him lately founded, together with Phelim Oconnor, and a lusty band of souldiours met the king at Chepstovv, returned victoriously, and by this meanes increased favour, & streightway they tvvo joyning vwith Cormack mac Dermot, Mac Rory, made a noble hosting upon Odonill the Irish enemy that invaded and grieved the Kings subjects of Ulster, when Lacy was once dead.

Odonill being vanquished, the Lord Justice forced pledges and Trowages of Oneale, to keepe the Kings peace, and diverse other employtes did hee during his time of government, which in particular rehearseth Flatsbury in his notes collected for Gerald Fitz Gerald, Earle of Kildare, Anno 1517.

To him succeeded in office Sir John Fitz Geffrey knight, <sup>y</sup> Geffrey Allan de la Zowche, <sup>z</sup> whom Earle Warren slevv, <sup>a</sup> to Zowch, Stephen de longa spata, who slew Oneale in the streets of Down, <sup>b</sup> and there dyed. Him followed William Den, in whose time Mac Cartye played the devill in Desmond, and to Den, Richard Capell, who envyed the Geraldines, and was of them taken prisoner, together with Theobald le

Butler, and Miles Cogan.<sup>c</sup> The king tooke up the variance, and discharged Den,<sup>d</sup> preferring David Barrye to his roome, who tamed the insolence of Morrice Fitz Morrice,<sup>e</sup> cousin germane to Fitz Gerald: upon Barrye came Vfford, upon Vfford, James Audeley, who dyed of a fall from his horse in Thomond: and then for the time Fitz Morrice governed, till the king sent over Sir Jeffrey de Genevill, newly returned in pilgrimage from the Holy Sepulture: Him called home againe Edward the first, in the fourth yeare of his raigne, and sent in his stead Robert Vfford the second time, who made his Vice-gerent, Fryar Fulborne, Bishop of Waterford, and resumed his charge at his next arryvall into Ireland.

At this time <sup>f</sup> the citty of Divelin was miserably wasted with fire, and the Bell-house of Christs Church utterly defaced, which the citizens before they repayred their private harmes jointly came to succor, & collections made to redresse the ruines of that ancient building first begun by the Danes, as I finde in a monument of that foundation, continued by Sitricus; Prince of Divelin, at the motion of Donate, then Bishop, & dedicated to the Blessed Trinity, finished by Richard Earle Strangbow, Fitz Stephens, and S. Laurence the Archbishop, and his foure successors, John of Evesham, Henry Scorchbill, Lord Justice, & Lucas, and lastly by John de S. Paul, which worke at the decay by fire, and since, many devout citizens of Divelin have beautified.g

The same Strongbowes Tombe spoyled by fall of the rooffe, Sir Henry Sidney Lord Deputy, restoreth at this present, who hath also given a sightly countenance to the Quire, by doing cost upon the Earle of Kildares Chappell, over against the which he hath left a monument of Captain Randolfe, late Colonell of Ulster, Valiantly dead in that service, John Samford Archbishop of Divelin Lord Justice, WWilliam Vescy Lord Justice, who pursued Omalaghlien king of Meth, that soone after was slaine.

The Souldan of Babylon<sup>h</sup> determined to vexe the Christians cities of the East. Tripolis, Tyrus, Berinthus, Sidon, Ptolemais, now parts of Turkey, vvhom to redeeme, & vwith their helpes to get againe the Holy Land, Edward the first had foure yeeres past obtained by licence of Martin the fourth,<sup>i</sup> and by confirmation of Honorius, his successor, the vvhole tenth of all ecclesiastical revenues in Ireland for 7. yeares, vvhatever followed a fifteene of the Temporalty: And the same yeere John Baliol Earle of Galvvay, founded Baliol Colledge in Oxford, made his homage to King Edward for his Kingdome of Scotland, and to the Lord Justice for his Earledome of Ireland.

Vescey vvas a sterne man, and full of courage, but rashe and impudent of his tongue: he convented before him, <sup>k</sup> John Earle of Kildare, & charged him vwith riots & vagaryes unseasonable, for that he ranged vwith his men abroad, & preyed upon privat enemies inordinatly, for malice & grudge, not for advancement of the publique vveale: vvhom the Earle as impatient as the other, answered thus: <sup>1</sup> By your honour and mine, my Lord, & by king Edwards hand, you vwould if you durst, impeach me in plaine tearmes of felony: for vvhreas I have the title, and you the fleece of Kildare, I wot well how great an eye sore I am in your sight, who if I could bee handsomely trussed up for a felon, then might my young Master your sonne, become a Gentleman: Iustice, Gentleman (quoth he) thou proud Earle, the Vescyes were gentlemen, before Kildare was an Earldome, and before the Welch bankrupt thy Cousin feathered his Nest in Leinster. But seeing thou darest me, I will surely breake thy heart, and with that word he called the Earle a notorious theefe & murderer. Then followed clattering of swords by Soul-diours on both parties, untill either side appeased his owne, and the Lord Iustice leaving his Lieutenant William Hay, sped over the King, whom immediatly followed the Earle, & as fast as Vescey charged Kildare with fellony, no lesse did Kildare impeach the Iustice of high treason, and in tryall thereof he asked the Combate. But when the listes royall were provided, Vescey was slipt away into France, and so disherited of all his lands in the county of Kildare, which were bestowed upon the Earle of Kildare and his heires for ever.

The Earle waxed insolent upon this successe, and squared with diverse Nobles English and Irish of the Land, hee took prisoner, Richard Earle of Ulster, and him detained untill the Parliament then assembled at Kilkenny, commanded his delivery, and forthat unrulynesse, disseised the Geraldines of the Castle of Sli-gagh, and of all his lands in Connaght.

William Doddsale Lord Justice. <sup>m</sup> This yere for the defence of Wales, and commodity of Passengers, to and from Ireland, the King did coast upon the Isle of Anglisey, called the mother of Wales, and builded there the castle de bello marisco, or Bewmarishe. Thomas Fitz Morice Lord Justice.

CAP. V.

I will begin this Chapter with the modestie of a good Clerke, Richard Havering who five yeares by dispensation had received the fruites and revenues of the Bishopricke of Divelin, and long might have done, had he beene so disposed. But now feeling in sleep a waight upon his stomacke, heavyer to his weening then any masse of mettall, whereof to be released he vowed in his dreame, all that ever he could make in this world: Suddainely the next morne, resigned the custodium of the Bishopricke, and contented himselfe with other ecclesiasticall cures incident to his vocation. The same yeare was the bane of the Templers in Ireland, to whom succeeded the Knights of the Rhodes. This profession began at Ierusalem, by certaine Gentlemen that kept their abode next to the Temple there, who till the Councell of Creetz increased not above the number of nine. <sup>q</sup> But thenceforth in little more then fiftie yeares, being enriched by contribution of all Christian Realmes, every where their houses were erected and endowed bountifullly: they grew to 300. Knights of the order and into inferiour brethréen innumerable. But with ease and wealth they declined now to such intollerable deformities of life and other superstitious errors, nothing lesse regarding then the purpose of this their foundation, that the generall Councell assembled at Vienna, disannulled the same for ever. And thereupon as in other countries so in Ireland, they confessed the publicke fame of their enormities, and themselves culpable, their persons they yeelded to perpetuall penance, their lands were given (though with some difficulty) to the Knights of S. Johns hospitall at Ierusalem, who since then for recovering the Iland of Rhodes from the Saracens, became famous, and multiplied much more honouraby then did the Templiers. Of this latter foundation was the priory of S. Johns at Kilmaynam besides Divelin. <sup>r</sup>

John Decer Major of Divelin builded the high Pype there, and the Bridge over the Liffy, toward S. Wolstans, and a chapell of our Lady at the Fryar minors, where he lyeth buried, repaired the Church of the Fryars preachers, and every friday tabled the Fryars at his owne costs.

In absence of VVogan, Sir VVilliam Burcke was Lord Warden of Ireland, to whom King Edward recommended Pierce of Gavestone the disquieter of all the nobility in England, a companion to the King in vice, bolstered up by the King so peremptorily against the will of his Councell, that whereas the said Pierce was by them exiled, Edward sent him now into Ireland with much honour and many Jewels, assigning him the commmodities royall of that Realme, which bred some bickering betweene the Earle of Ulster Sir Richard Burke, and Gavestone, who notwithstanding bought the hearts of the Souldiours with his liberality, subdued Obrene, edified sundry Castles, caws-wayes, and bridges, but within three yeares he retyred from Flaunders, into England, where the nobles besieged him at Scarborough and smit off his head.

John VVogan Lord Justice, <sup>s</sup> summoned a Parliament at Kilkenny, where wholesome lawes were ordained, but never executed: There fell the Bishops in argument about their Iurisdictions and in espe- ciall the Archbishop of Divelin forbad the Primate of Ardmagh to lift up his crosyer within the province of Leinster. In ratifying of which priviledge I have seene the copy of Pope Honorius Bull exemplified among the recordes of S. Patricks Church, shortly after Rowland Joyce, then Primate, stale by night in his pontificals from Howth to the priory of Grace-dieu, where the Archbishops servants met him, and violently chased him out of all the diocesse. This Archbishop was named John Aleke, after whose death were elected in scisme & division of sides, two successors, Thorneburgh Lord Chancellor, and Bignore Treasurer of Ireland. The Chancellor to strengthen his election, hastily went to sea, and perished by shipwracke, the other submitting his cause to the processe of law tarryed at home, and sped.

Theobald de Verdon Lord Justice. Sixe thousand Scots fighting men, under the conduct of Edward Bruise<sup>t</sup> brother to Robert King of Scotland, also the Earle Murray, John Menteith, John Steward, and others landed in the north of Ireland, <sup>u</sup> ioyned with the Irish, and conquered Ulster, gave the Englishmen three notable overthrowes, crowned the said Bruise King of Ireland, burned Churches and Abbeys, with all the people found therein, men, women, and children. Then was Sir Edmund Butler chosen Lord Justice, <sup>v</sup> who combined the Earle of Ulster, and the Geraldines in friendship, himselfe with Sir John Mandevill, and preserved the rest of the Realme.

In the necke of these troubles, arose foure Princes of Connagh, to impaire and scatter the English force. But then the Burckes and the Berninghams discomfited and slew the number of eleaven thousand besides Athenry. To Sir Richard Berningham belonged a lusty young swayne, John Hussee, whom his Lord commanded to take a view of the dead carcasses about the walles, and bring him word whether Okelly his mortall foe were slaine among them. Hussee passed forth with one man to turne up and peruse the bodies. All this marked Okelly, who lurking in a bush thereby, being of old time well acquainted with the valiantnes & truth of Hussee, sore longed to traine him from his Captaine, and presuming now upon this opportunity, disclosed himself & said. ‘ Hussee, thou seest I am at all points armed, and have my Esquire, a manly man, besides me, thou art thin and thy page a youngling so that if I loved not thee for thine owne sake, I might betray thee for thy Masters. But come and serve me at my request, & I promise thee by S. Patrickes staffe, to make thee a Lord in Connaght, of more ground, then thy Master hath in Ireland.’ When these wordes waighed him nothing, his owne man (a stout lubber) began to reprove him, for not relenting to so rich a proffer, assured him with an oath, whereupon hee proffered to gage his soule for performance. Now had Hussee three enemies, and first he turned to his owne knave, and him he slew, next hee raught to Okellyes Squire a great rappe under the pit of his eare, which overthrew him: Thirdly he bestirred himselfe so nimblly that ere any helpe could be hoped for, he had also slaine Okelly, and perceiving breath in the Squire, he drawed him up againe, & forced him, upon a truncheon to beare his Lords head into the high towne, which presented to Birmingham, and the circumstances declared, he dubbed Hussee Knight and him advanced to many preferments, whose family became afterwards Barons of Galtrime. While the Scots were thus matched, Robert de Bruise King of Scots, tooke shore at Cragfergus, to assist his brother, whose Souldiours committed sacrilege and impiety, against Monasteries, Tombes, Altars, Virgins, robbed Churches of all their plate and ornaments. They of Ulster, sent to the Lord Justice pittifull supplication, for aide in this misery, who delivered them the Kings power and standard, wherewith under pretence to expell the Scots, they raunged through the country with more grievance and vexation to the subjects, then did the strangers. Le Bruise proceeded and spoyled Cashell, and wheresoever he lighted upon the Butlers lands, those hee burned and destroyed unmercifully. By this time <sup>w</sup> had the Lord Justice, and Thomas Fitz John Earle of Kildare, Richard de Clare, and Arnold de Powere, Baron of Donoile, furnished and armed thirty thousand men ready to set forward. Then came newes that William de Burgo the Earles brother was taken by the Scots, whereof the Irish of Ulster imboldened with the presence of the Scotish Army, and with the late discomfiture which Earle Richard Burcke sustained at Coynes, denied their alleagance openly, and conspired in the behalfe of Edward le Bruise, whom they proclaimed King. The Lord Justice had assembled such force against them, under the leading of the Geraldines and Poweres, that each of them was thought sufficient, by himself, to winne the field. But suddainely the two Captaines, and their adherents squared, so as no good conclusion might be inferred: Roger Mortimer, trusting by their discention to imbeazell a victory, culled out fifteene thousand Souldiours, and met the Scots at Kenles, where he was shamefully foyled, his men (as folke supposed) wilfully forsaking him, and bearing false hearts. Vp start the Irish of Mounster at these newes, the Ocooles, Obrines, and Omores, and wasted with fire and sword from Arkloe to Leix; with them coped the Lord Justice and made a great slaughter, fourescore of their heads were set upon Divelin Castle.

The mean while Edward Bruise raigned in Ulster, held his courts, pronounced his enemies traytors, abandoned the English blood, exhorted the Irish of Leinster to doe the like, whereupon Donald the sonne of Arthur Mac Morrow, a slip of the royall family, displayed his banner within two miles of Divelin, but him Traherone tooke prisoner, sent him to the castle of Dublin, whence he escaped, slyding downe from the Turret, by a cord that one Adam Maugle brought him. The said Maugle was drawne and hanged.

Roger Mortimer<sup>x</sup> Lord Justice pacified the displeasure, betweene Richard Earle of Ulster, and the Nobles that had put the said Earle under surety, misdeeming him of certaine riots committed against the kings subjects, wherby the Scots caught strength and courage, whose ravening, caused such horrible scarcity in Ulster, that the Souldiours which in the yeare before abused the Kings authority, to purvey themselves of wanton fare, surfeited with flesh and aquavitæ all the

Lent long, proll'd and pilled insatiably without neede, and without regard of poore people, whose onely provision they devoured: Those (I say) now living in slavery under Le Bruise, starved for hunger, when they had first experienced many lamentable shifts, as in scratching the dead bodyes out of their graves, in whose skulls they boyled the same flesh, and fed thereof. Mortymer went over to the King indebted to the Citizens of Divelin for his viands, a thousand poundes, whereof he payde not one smulkin, and many a bitter curse carried with him to the sea.

William Archbishop of Cashell Lord Chancellor was left Lord Warden of Ireland, in whose timey Bermingham aforesaid being generall of the field, and under him Captains, Tute, Verdon, Tripton, Sutton, Cusacke and Manpas, led forth the Kings power against Edward Bruise, pitching by Dundalke, the Primate of Ardmagh personally accompanying our souldiours, blessing their enterprise, and assyling them all, ere ever they began to encounter. In this conflict the Scots were vanquished full & whole, 2000. slaine, & Manpas that pressed into the throng to meet with Bruise, was found in the search, dead, covering the dead body of Bruise. Thus dissolved the Scottish Kingdome in Ireland, and Bermingham sending his head to the King, received in recompence the Earldome of Lowth, and to his heires for ever the Barony of Ardee and Athenry.

Alexander Bigmore, <sup>2</sup> Archbishop of Divelin, sued to Pope John the 21. (so I reckon, omitting the scismaticke and dame Ioane) for priviledge of an Vniversitie to bee ordained in Divelin, which tooke effect, and the first three Doctors of Divinity the said Bishop did create, WWilliam Hardit a Fryar preacher, Henry Coggy a Fryar minor, Fryar Edmund Kermerdin, & one Doctor of the Canon law, WWilliam Rodiard Deane of S. Patricks, Chancellour of the said Vniversity, who kept their termes & commencements solemnely, neither was the same ever disfranchised, but onely through variety of time discontinued, and now since the subversion of monasteries utterly extinct, vwherein the Divines vvere cherished, and open exercise maintained. A motion vvas made in this last Parliament to erect it againe, contributions layde together, Sir Henry Sidney then Lord Deputy, proffered 20. pound lands, & one hundred pounds in money, others follovvved after their abilities & devotions, the name devised Master Acworth, Plantolium of Plantaganet and Bullyne. But vwhile they disputed of a convenient place for it, and of other circumstances, they let fall the principall.

Thomas Fitz John, Earle of Kildare, Lord Iustice, to vvhom succeeded Bermingham Earle of Louth, and to him Sir John Darcy. At this time<sup>a</sup> lived in the Diocesse of Ossorye, the Lady Alice Kettle, vvhom the Bishop ascited to purge the same of inchaunting and Witch-craft objected to her, and to Petronilla, and Basill her complices. They charged her mightily to have carnall conference vwith a spirit called Robin Artison, to whom shee sacrificized in the high way nine redde Cockes, and nine Peacockes eyes, shee swept the streetes of Kilkenny betweene compleere and twilight, raking all the filth towards the doores of her sonne VVilliam Outlawe, murmuring these wordes, To the house of VVilliam my sonne, hye all the wealth of Kilkenny towne. At the first conviction they abjured and accepted pennance, but were very shortly found in relapse, and then Petronilla was burned at Kilkenny, the other twayne could not be had: shee at the houre of her death, accused the said VVilliam as privy to their sorceryes, whom the Bishop helde in durance nine weekes, forbidding his keepers to eate or drink with him, or to speake with him more then once in the day, by procurement of Arnold le Power, then Senischall of Kilkenny hee was delivered, & corrupted the Senischall to vexe the Bishop, which he did, thrusting him into prison for three moneths. In ryfling the closet of Alice, they found a wafer of Sacramentall bread, having the devils name stamped thereon, instead of IESUS, and a pype of oyntment, wherewith shee greased a staffe, whereon shee ambled through thicke and thinne, when and how shee listed. This businesse troubled all the Cleargy of Ireland, the rather for that the Lady was supported by Noblemen: and lastly, conveyed into England, since which time no man wotteth what became of her.

CAP. VI.

Edward the third, and Richard the second.

SCARCELY vvas this businesse ended, <sup>b</sup> but another devill possessed another frantick gentleman of the nation of the O-tooles in Leinster, named Adam Duffe, vvhoso denied obstinately the Incarnation of Christ, the Trinity of persons in unity of the God-head, the resurrection of the flesh. Hee called the Holy Scripture, a fable; the blessed Virgin, a vvhore; the See Apostolick, erroneous; for vvhich assertions hee was burned in Hogging greene besides Divelin.

Roger Outlaw, Prior of S. Johns of Ierusalem at Kilmainham, <sup>c</sup> became Lord Justice. Great variance arising betvveene the Geraldines, Butlers, and Berminghams on the one side, and the Powers and Burkes on the other side, for tearing the Earle of Kildare a Rymer. The Lord Justice summoned a Parliament to accord them, wherein he himselfe was faine to cleare the slander of heresie fathered upon him by Richard Ledred, Bishop of Ossory. The Bishoppe had given a declaration against Arnold le Power, convented and convict in his consistory of certaine hereticall opinions; but because the beginning of Powers accusations concerned the Justices kinsman, and the Bishop was mistrusted to prosecute his owne wrong, and the person of the man, rather then the fault, a day was limited for the justifying of the bill, the party being apprehended and respited thereunto. This dealing, the Bishop (who durst not stirre out of Kilkenny, to prosecute his accusation) reputed partiall; and when by meanes thereof the matter hanged in suspence, hee infamed the said Prior, as an abbettour and favourer of Arnolds heresie. The Prior submitted himselfe to the tryall, and three several Proclamations were cryed in Court, that any man might lawfully come in and indict, accuse or say evidence against the Iustice: none came: then passed the Councell a decree, commanding to appeare at Divelin, all Bishops, Abbots, Pryors, the Majors of Divelin, Corke, Limericke, Waterford, Droghedah, the Sheriffes, Knights, and Senischalls of every shire. Out of them all they sorted sixe Inquisitours, which in secrecie examined the Bishoppes and persons aforesaid one by one, who with universall consent deposed for the Pryor, that to their judgements hee was a zealous and faithfull childe of the Catholique Church. The meane while deceased le Power prisoner in the Castle, and because he stood unpurged, long he laye unburyed.

The Irish of Leinster made insurrections, so did Magoghigan in Meth, and Obrien in Mounster, whom William Earle of Ulster, and James of Ormond vanquished. In which sturre, WWilliam Bermingham, a warriour incomparable, was found halting, and was condemned to dye by Roger Outlawe, Pryor of Kilmainam, then Lieutenant to the Lord Iustice, and so hanged was hee, a Knight among thousands odde and singular. So outragious were the Leinster Irish that in one Church they burned 80. innocent soules, asking no more but the life of their Priest then at Masse, whom they notwithstanding sticked with their Iavelins, spurned the blessed Sacrament, and wasted all with fire, neither forced they the Popes interdiction, nor any censures ecclesiasticall denounced against them: But maliciously persevered in that fury, till the Citizens of Weixford tamed them, slevv foure hundred in one skirmish, the rest flying, vvere all drenched in the vvater of Slane.

Thomas Burgh e Treasurer and Lieutenant of Ireland, vwhile Darcy Lord Iustice pursued the murtherers of WWilliam Bourk Earle of Vlster, a young gentleman of twventy yeares olde, vvhom the seditions of Maundevill murdered besides Cragfergus. And vwhen hee had scourged those Traytours, he entred Scotland vwith an army and might have possessed the Islands besides, had they bene vworth the keeping, into vvhich Islands besides him and Sussex the late Lieutenant of Ireland no Governour ever yet adventured.

Sir John Carleton Lord Iustice, f vwith vvhom came his brother Thomas Bishop of Hereford, Lord Chauncellor, and John Rice Treasurer, and two hundred Welchmen souldiours. The Bishop became Lord Justice, in whose time all the Irish of Ireland were at defiance with the English, but were shortly calmed by the Earles of Kildare and Desmond.

Sir John Darcy by the Kings Letters Patents Lord Justice of Ireland during life, in the fourteenth yeare of Edward the third, which king abused by some corrupt informers, <sup>h</sup> called in under his signet royall, franchises, and liberties, and graunts whatsoever his predecessours had ratified to the Realme of Ireland, and to every person thereof. This revocation was taken very displeasantly.

The English of birth, and the English of bloud falling to words, and divided in factions about it. The Irish laye wayting for the contention, so as the Realme was even upon point to give over all and rebell. For remedy the Justice began a Parliament at Divelin, whereto the nobles refused to make appearance, & assembled themselves quietly without disturbance at Kilkenny, where they with the Commons agreed upon certaine questions to be demaunded of the King by way of supplication, by which questions they partly signified their grieves: Those in effect were,

1. How a Realme of warre might be governed

• 1340.

by one, both unskilfull and unable in all warlike services.

2. How an officer under the king that entred very poore, might in one yeare grow to more excessive wealth, then men of great patrimony in many yeares.

3. How it happened seeing they all were called Lords of their owne, that the Lord of them all was not a penny the richer for them.

The Prince of this repining was Morice Earle of Desmond,<sup>i</sup> whom Vfford the now Lord Iustice in paine of forfeiture of all his lands commaunded to the Parliament at Dublin, and there put him under arrest, delivered him by main prise of the tvvo Earles Ulster & Ormond, & of 28. knights & squiers: All vwhich, except the Earles & tvwo knights, lost their inheritance by rigour of the said Vfford, because Desmond had escaped.

Therefore at the decease of the Lords Iustice, vwhich ensued the next yeare, Bonfires and gavvdes vvere solemnized in all the Land: his Lady vvas a miserable sott, and led him to extortion and bribery, much he clipped the prerogatives of the Church, and vvas so hated, that even in the sight of the country, he vvas robbed vwithout rescue, by Mac Carty, notwithstanding he gathered povver, and dispersed the rebellions of Ulster.

Robert Darcy Lord Justice,<sup>k</sup> chosen by the Coun-cell, untill the Kings charter came to Sir John Fitz Morrice, vwho inlarged Fitz Thomas Earle of Kildare, left in holde by Vfford, Fitz Morrice vvas deposed, and Sir Walter Bermingham elected, who procured safe conduct for Desmond to pleade his right before the King, where he was liberally intreated & allowed towards his expences there twenty shillings a day at the Princes charge, in consideration of which curtesie to his kinsman, the Earle of Kildare, accompanied with diverse Lords, Knights, and chosen horsemen, served the King at Callice, a towne thought impregnable, and returned after the winning thereof in great pompe and jollity.

John Archer of Kilmainam, Lieutenant to the Lord
followed Sir Thomas Rokesby knight.

This yeare<sup>m</sup> dyed Kemuricke Shereman, sometimes Major of Divelin, a Benefactour to every Church and religious house twenty miles round about the citty: his legacies to poore and others, besides the liberality shewed in his life time, amounted to 3000. marks: with such plenty were our fathers blessed, that cheerefully gave of their true winnings to needfull purposes, whereas our time that gaineth excessively, and whineth at every farthing to be spent on the poore, is yet oppressed vwith scarcity and beggery.

The same time dwelled in Ulster Sir Robert Savage, a vwealthie Knight, vwho the rather to preserve his ovn, beganne to vwall & fortifie his Mannour houses, vwith castles and plyes against the Irish enemy, exhorting his heire Sir Henry Savage, to intend that Worke so beneficiale for himselfe and his posterity. Father (quoth he) I remember the Proverbe, better a Castle of bones, then of stones, vwhere strength and courage of valiant men are to helpe us. Never vwill I, by the grace of God, cumber my selfe vwith dead vwalls, my fort shall be vheresover young blouds be stirring, and vwhere I finde roome to fight. The father in a fume let lye the building, and forsvvore it. But yet the vwant thereof, and such like, hath beene the decaye asvvell of the Savages, as of all the Englishe Gentle-men in Ulster, as the lacke of vvalled townes is also the principall occasion of the rudenesse and wildenesse in other partes of Ireland. This Savage having prepared an army against the Irish, allowed to every Soul-diour before he buckled with the enemy, a mighty draught of Aquavitæ, Wine, or old Ale, and killed in provision for their returne, beefes, venison, and foule great plenty, which diverse of his Captains disliked, & considering the successe of warre to be uncertaine, esteemed it better pollicy to poyson the cates or to doe them away, then to cherish a sort of Catives with princely foode: If ought should happen to themselves in this adventure of so few, against so many. Hereat smyled the Gentleman and said: Tush yee are too full of envy, this world is but an Inne whereunto you have no speciall interest, but are onely tennants at the will of the Lord. If it please him to commaund us from it, as it were from our lodging, & to set other good fellowes in our roomes, what hurt shall it be for us to leave them some meate for their suppers, let them hardly winne it, and weare it, If they enter our dwellings, good manners would no lesse but to welcome them, with such fare as the country breedeth, and with all my heart much good may it doe them: Notwithstanding I presume so farre upon your noble courage, that verily my minde giveth me, that wee shall returne at night, and banquet our selves with our owne store, and so they did, having slaine 3000. Irishmen.

Morrice Fitz Thomas Earle of Desmond, n Lord Justice during life, whom followed Sir Thomas Rokesbye a knight, sincere and upright of conscience, who being controlled for suffering himselfe to be served in wooden Cuppes; Answered, these homely Cuppes and dishes pay truely for what they containe, I had rather drinke out of wood, and pay gold and silver, then drinke out of gold, and make wooden payment.

Almericus de Sancto Amando, James Butler Earle

of Ormond, <sup>o</sup> and Morrice Fitz Thomas Earle of Kildare, <sup>p</sup> Justices of Ireland by turnes. <sup>q</sup> To this last, the Kings letters appointed in yearely fee, for his office 500. pounds, with promise that the said governour should finde twenty great horse to the field, and should bee the twentith man in going out against the enemy, which allovvance and conditions at these days, I thinke were ordinary.

Leonell the third sonne of Edward the third Duke of Clarence, <sup>r</sup> and in the right of his wife, Earle of Ulster, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. He published an inhibition, to all of Irish birth, that none of them should approach his army, nor be employed in service of the warres. Obrene he vanquished suddenly, but no man wist how, an hundred of his principall Souldiours in garrison were missed, whose dispatch, that seditious decree was thought to have procured, wherefore hee advised himselfe and united the people, shewing alike fatherly care towards them all, and ever after prospered, Knights he created these Gentlemen, the worthiest then in Chivalry, and at this day continuing in great worship, Preston, now the house of Gormanstowne, Holywood, Talbot, Cusacke, Delahide, Patricke, Robert and John de Fraxinis. The exchequer he removed to Catherlagh, and bestowed in furnishing that towne 500. pounds.

nor able without many teares to behold his pallaces, and chambers of Estate, which represented unto him the solace past, and doubled his sorrow, sought some occasion of businesse and visited Ireland, where diverse Lords and Princes of Ulster renewed their homage, and he placing Roger Mortimer his Lieutenant, returned quietly, but within foure yeares after, informed of the trayterous death of Mortimer, whom he loved entirely, and being wonderfull eager in hastening the revenge thereof upon the Irish, he journeyed thither the second time, y levied infinite subsidies of money, by penall exactions, and with his absence as also with those injuries, fed the hatred and opportunity of the conspiratours at home, for Henry Duke of Lancaster, intercepted the Kingdome, whose sonne with the Duke of Gloucesters sonne, King Richard shut up in the Castle of Trim, and then shipped course into England, tooke land at Milford Haven, found his defence so weake and unsure, that to avoide further inconvenience and peril of himselfe and his friends, he condiscended to resigne the Crowne.

CAP. VII.

ALEXANDER Bishop of Meth, <sup>2</sup> Lieutenant of Ireland, under Thomas Lancaster the King's brother, so was also the worshipfull Knight Sir Stephen Scroope, whom for his violence and extortion before used, in the same office under King Richard, the common voyce and out-cry of poore people damned. <sup>a</sup> This report hearing the Lady his wife, she would in no wise assent to live in his company there, but if he sware a solemne oath on the Bible, that wittingly he should wrong no Christian creature in the land, that duely and truely he should see payment made for all expences, and hereof, she said, she had made a vow to Christ so deliberately, that unlesse it were on his part firmly promised, she could not without perill of her soule goe with him: her husband assented, and accomplished her boone effectually, recovered a good opinion, schooled his Caters, enriched the country, continued a plentifull house, remissions of great fines, remedyes for persons endamaged to the Prince, pardons of lands and lives he granted so charitably and discreetely, that his name was never uttered among them, without many blessings and prayers, and so cheerefully they served him against the Irish, that in one day he spoyled Arthur Mac Murrough, brent his country, restored O-Carrol to the towne of Callane, with-held by Walter Burke, slew a multitude of Kerneghes, and quieted Leinster. Not long before, the Major of Divelin John Drake, <sup>b</sup> with his band out of the Citty, had slaine of the same Irish Outlawes 400.

In this Kings raigne the inhabitants of the county and towne of Corke, <sup>c</sup> being tyred with perpetuall oppressions of their Irish borderers, complained themselves in a generall writing, directed to the Lord of Rutheland and Corke, the Kings Deputy, and to the Councell of the Realme, then assembled at Divelin, which Letter because it openeth the decay of those partes, and the state of the Realme in times past, I have thought good to enter here as it was delivered me, by Francis Agard Esquire, one of her Majesties privy Councell in Ireland.

It may please your wisedomes, <sup>d</sup> to have pittie of us the Kings poore subjects, within the county of Corke, or else we be cast away for ever, for where there was in this countie these Lords by name, besides Knights, Esquiers, Gentlemen, and Yeoman, to a great number, that might dispend yearelle 800. pounds, 600. pounds, 400. pounds, 200. pounds, 100. pounds, 100. markes, 20. pounds, 20. markes, 10. pounds, some more, some lesse, to a great number, besides these Lords following.

First the Lord Marquesse Caro his yearly revenues was, besides Dorzey Hauen and other Creekes, 2200. pounds sterlinc.

The Lord Barnevale of Bearehaven, his yearly revenues was, beside Bearehaven and other Creekes, 1600. pounds sterlinc.

The Lord Vggan of the great Castle, his yearly revenues was, besides havens and creekes, 1300. pounds sterlinc.

The Lord Balram of Emforte, his yearly revenues was, besides havens and creekes, 1300. pounds sterlinc.

The Lord Courcy of Kilbretton his yearly revenues, besides havens and creekes, 1500. pounds sterlinc.

The Lord Mandevil of Barrenstelly his yearly revenues, besides havens and creekes, 1500. pounds sterlinc.

The Lord Arundell of the strand his yearly revenues, besides havens and creekes, 1500. pounds sterling.

The Lord Baron of the Guard his yearly revenues, besides havens and creekes, 1100. pounds sterling.

The Lord Sleynie of Baltimore his yearly revenue, besides havens and creeks, 800. pounds sterling.

The Lord Roche of Poole-castle his yearly revenue, besides havens and creekes, 1000. pounds sterling.

The Kings Majesty hath the Lands of the late young Barry by forfeiture, the yearly revenue whereof, besides two rivers and creekes, and all other casualties is, 1800. pounds sterling.

And at the end of this Parliament Your Lordship with the Kings most noble Councell may come to Corke, and call before you all these Lords and other Irish men, and binde them in paine of losse of life, lands and goods, that never any of them doe make warre upon another, without licence or commandement of you my Lord Deputy, & the Kings Councell, for the utter destruction of these parts, is that onely cause, and once all the Irish men, and the King's enemies were driven into a great valley, called Glanehought, betwixt two great mountaines, called Maccorte or the leprous Iland, and their they lived long and many yeares, with their white meat till at the last these English Lords fell at variance among themselves, and then the weakest part tooke certaine Irish men to take his part, and so vanquished his enemy, and thus fell the English Lords at variance among themselves, till the Irish men were stronger then they, and drove them away and now have the whole country under them, but that the Lord Roche, the Lord Courcy, and the Lord Barry onely remaine, with the least part of their auncestors possessions, and young Barry is there upon the Kings portion, payng his Grace never a penny Rent. Wherefore we the Kings poore subjects, of the City of Corke, Kinsale, and Yowghall, desire your Lordship to send hither two good Iustices, to see this matter ordered, and some English Captaines, with twenty English men that may be Captaines over us all, and we will rise with them to redresse those enormities, all at our owne costs. And if you doe not, we be all cast away, and then farewell Mounster for ever. And if you will not come nor send, we will send over to our Liege Lord, the King, and complaine on you all. Thus farre the letter.

And at this day the Citty of Corke is so encumbred with unquiet neighbours of great power, that they are forced to watch their gates continually, to keepe them shut at service times, at meales, from sunne set, to sunne arising; nor suffer any stranger to enter there with his weapon, but to leave the same at a lodge appointed. They walke out for recreation at seasons, with strength of men furnished, they match in wedlocke among themselves, so that welnigh the whole citty is allyed together. It is to be hoped that the late sent over Lord President of Mounster, Sir John Parrot, who hath chosen the same place to abide in, as having greatest neede of a Governour resident, would ease the inhabitants of this feare, and scourge the Irish Outlawes that annoy the whole region of Mounster.

Henry the 4. e in the 10. yeare of his raigne, gave the Sword to the Citty of Divelin, which Citty was first governed, as appeareth by their auncient seale, called, Signum proposituræ, by a Provost, and in the 14. yeare of H. the 3. by a Major, & two Bayliffes, which Bayliffes were changed into Sheriffes, by Charter of Edward the 6. an. 1547. This mayoralty both for state and charge of that office, and for the bountifull hospitality exceedeth any Citty in England, except London.

While Henry the 5. reigned, I finde lieutenants and deputyes of Ireland specially remembred, John Talbott of Hollamshire Lord of Furnyvall. Thomas de Lancaster, Senischa of England, and Stephen le Scroope his Deputy, John Duke of Bedford then also Lord Keeper of England, and the noble Earle of Ormond.

Sir James Butler,<sup>f</sup> whose grandsire was James sur-named the chast, for that of all vices hee most abhorred the sinne of the flesh, and in subduing of the same gave notable example. In the red Moore of Athye (the sun almost lodged in the West, and miraculously standing still in his epicycle the space of three houres till the feat was accomplished, and no pit in that bogge annoying either horse or man on his part) he vanquished Omore and his terrible Army with a few of his owne, and with the like number Arthur Mac Murrrough, at whose might and puissance, all Leinster trembled.<sup>g</sup> To the imitation of this mans worthinesse, the compiler of certaine precepts touching the rule of a Common-wealth, exciteth his Lord the said Earle in diverse places of that Worke<sup>h</sup> incidently, eftsoones putting him in minde that the Irish beene false by kinde, that it were expedient, and a worke of Charity to execute upon them (willfull and malicious transgredours) the Kings Lawes somewhat sharply, <sup>i</sup> That Odempseye being winked at a while, abused that small time of sufferance, to the injury of the Earle of Kildare, intruding unjustly upon the Castle of Ley, from whence the said Deputy had justly expelled him, and put the Earle in possession thereof, that notwithstanding their oathes and pledges, yet they are no longer true then they feele themselves the vweaker.

son George, Duke of Clarence, afterwards drowned in a butt of Malmsey: his god fathers at the front were the Earles of Ormond and Desmond.<sup>r</sup>

Whether the commotion of Iacke Cade an Irishman borne, naming himselfe Mortimer, and so clayming cousinage to diverse noble houses, proceeded from this crew, it is uncertainte: <sup>s</sup> surely the Duke was thereof vehemently mistrusted, & immediately began his tumults, which because our English histories discourse at large, I omit as impertinent.

Those broyles being couched for a time, Richard held himselfe in Ireland, being lately by Parliament ordained Protector of the Realme of England, leaving his agent in the Court his brother the Earle of Salisbury<sup>t</sup> Lord Chauncellour, to whom he declared by letters, the trouble then toward in Ireland, which letter exemplified by Sir Henry Sidney, Lord Deputy, a great searcher and preserver of Antiquities, as it came to my hands, I thinke it convenient here to set downe.

And like it you to wit, that sith I wrote last unto the King our soveraigne Lord his Highnes, the Irish enemy, that is to say, Magoghigan, and with him three or foure Irish Captaines, associate with a great fellowship of English rebels, notwithstanding, that they were within the King our Soveraigne Lord his power, of great malice, and against all truth, have maligned against their legiance, and vengeably have brent a great towne of mine inheritance, in Meth, called Ramore, and other villages thereabouts, and murdered and brent both men, women, and children, without mercy. The which enemies be yet assembled in woods and forts, wayting to doe the hurt and grievance to the Kings subjects that they can thinke or imagine, for which cause I write at this time unto the Kings Highnes, and beseech his good grace for to hasten my payment for this land, according to his letters of vvarrant, nowv late directed unto the Treasurer of England, to the intent I may vvage men in sufficient number, for to resist the malice of the same enemyes, and punish them in such vvyse, that other vwhich vvould doe the same, for lacke of resistance in time, may take example; for doubtlesse, but if my payment bee had in all haste, for to have men of vvarre in de- fence and safe-guard of this Land, my povver cannot stretch to keepe it in the Kings obeysance. And very necessity vwill compell mee to come into England to live there, upon my poore livelode, for I had lever bee dead, then any inconvenience should fall thereunto in my default; for it shall never bee chronicled, nor re-

maine in scripture, by the grace of God, that Ireland
 vvas lost by my negligence. And therefore I beseech you right vvorshipfull brother, that you will hold to your hands instantly, that my payment may bee had at this time, in eschuing all inconveniences, for I have example in other places, more pitty it is for to dread shame; and for to acquire my truth unto the Kings Highnes, as my dutie is. And this I pray and exhort you good brother, to shew unto his good grace, and that you willbe so good, that this language may be enacted at this present Parliament for my excuse in time to come, and that you will bee good to my servant
Roger Roe the bearer hereof, and to mine other servants in such things as they shall pursue unto the kings Highnes: And to give full faith and credence unto the report of the said Roger, touching the said maters Right worshipfull, and with all my heart

Your faithfull true brother,

Of such power was Magoghigan in those dayes, who as he wan and kept it by the sword, so now he

Heere beganne factions of the nobility in Ireland, favouring diverse sides that strived for the Crovvne of England, for Richard in those tenne yeares of government, exceedingly tyed unto him the hearts of the noblemen and gentlemen in this land, vvhhereof diverse vvere scattered and slaine vwith him at Waterford,<sup>u</sup> as the contrary part vvas also the next yeare by Edward Earle of Marche, the Dukes brother, at Mortimers crosse in Wales, in vwhich meane time the Irish vvaxed hardye,<sup>v</sup> and usurped the English Countreyes insufficiently defended, as they had done by like opportunity in the latter end of Richard the second. These two seasons did set them so a-floate, that henceforwards they could never be cast out from their forcible possessions, holding by plaine wrong all Vlster, and by certaine Irish Tenures, no little portions of Mounster and Connaght, left in Meth and Leinster, where the civill subjects of English bloud did ever most prevaile demned, and for the same beheaded at Droghedah. <sup>c</sup> James the father of this Thomas of Desmond, being suffered and not controuled, during the government of Richard Duke of Yorke his godsip : and of Thomas Earle of Kildare his kinsman put upon the Kings subjects within the Countyes of Waterford, Corke, Kerry, and Limericke, the Irish impositions of Coyne and Liverie, Cartings, carriages, loadings, cosherings, bonnaght, and such like, which customes are the very nurse and teat of all Irish enormities, and extort from the poore tennants everlasting Sesse, allowance of meate and money, their bodies and goods in service, so that their horses and their Galloglashes lye still upon the Farmers, eate them out, begger the Countrey, foster a sort of idle vagabonds, ready to rebell if their Lord commaund them, ever nusseled in stealth and robberyes. These evill presidents given by the Father, the sonne did exercise being Lord Deputy, to whome the reformation of that disorder especially belonged, notwithstanding the same fault being winked at in others, and with such rigour avenged in him, it was manifestly taken for a quarrell sought and picked.

Two yeares after, the said Earle of Worcester <sup>d</sup> lost his head, while Henry the 6. taken out of the towre, was set up againe, and King Edward proclaymed Vsurper, and then was Kildare enlarged, whom being likewise attainte, they thought also to have ridde, and shortly both the Earles of Kildare and Desmond were restored to their bloud by Parliament.

Sir Rowland Eustace,<sup>e</sup> Knight, sometimes Treasurer, and Lord Chauncellour, and lastly, Lord Deputye of Ireland, founded Saint Frauncis Abbey besides Kilkullen bridge.

Edward,<sup>f</sup> a yeare before his death, honoured his younger son Richard the infant, Duke of Yorke, with the title of Lieutenant over this Land. But his unnatural Vnkle Richard the Third, when he had murdered the childe, and the elder brother called Edward the 5. He then preferred to that Office his ovne sonne Edward, vvhose Deputy was Gerald Earle of Kildare, and bare that office a vwhile in Henry the 7. his dayes. To whom came the vvylie Priest, Sir Richard Symonds, & presented a lad his scholler, named Lambert, vvhom he fained to be the son of George Duke of Clarence, lately escaped the tovvre of London. And the child could his pedigree so readily, and had learned of the Priest such princely behaviour, that he lightly moved the said Earle, and many Nobles of Ireland tendering the Seed Royall of Richard Plantagenet, and George his sonne, as also maligning the advancement of the house of Lancaster, in Henry the seventh, either to thinke or make the world weene, they thought verily this childe to bee

And although King Henry more then halfe marred their sport, in shewing the right Earle through all the streetes of London, yet the Lady Margaret Duchesse of Burgoine, sister to Edward the fourth, John de la Poole her Nephew, the Lord Lovel, Sir Thomas Broughton Knight, and diverse other Captaines of this conspiracy devised to abuse the colour of this young Earles name, for preferring their purpose, which if it came to good, they agreed to depose Lambert, and to erect the very Earle indeed now prisoner in the towre, for whose quarrell had they pretended to fight, they deemed it likely hee should have beene made away: Wherefore it was blazed in Ireland, that the King to mocke his subjects, had schooled a Boy to take upon him the Earle of Warwickes name, and had shewed him about London to blinde the eyes of simple folkes, and to defeate the lawfull Inheritour of the good Duke of Clarence, their countryman and Protectour during his life, to whose linage they also derived a title of the Crowne. In all haste they assembled at Divelin, and there in Christ-Church they Crowned this Idoll, honouring him with titles imperiall, feasting and triumphing, rearing mighty shoutes and cryes, carrying him from thence, to the Kings Castle upon tall mens shoulders, that he might be seene and noted, as he was surely an honourable Boy to looke upon. Thereupon ensued the Battle of Stoke, wherein Lambert and his Master were taken, but never executed, the Earle of Lincolne, the Lord Lovel, Martine Swarte, the Almaigne Captaine, and Morice Fitz Thomas Captaine of the Irish, were slaine, and all their power discomfited.

Iasper Duke of Bedford and Earle of Penbroke, <sup>g</sup> Lieutenant, and WWalter Archbishop of Divelin his Deputy. In this time befell another like illusion of Ireland, procured from the Dutchesse aforesaid, and certaine Nobles of England, whereby was exalted as rightfull King of England, and undoubted Earle of Vlster, the counterfeit Richard Duke of Yorke preserved from King Richards cruelty, as his adherents faced the matter downe, and with this maygame lord, named indeede Peter (in scorne Perkin) WWarbecke, flattered themselves many yeares.

Then was Sir Edward Poynings<sup>h</sup> Knight, sent over Lord Deputy, with commission to apprehend his principall partners in Ireland, amongst whom was named Gerald Fitz Gerald Earle of Kildare, whose purgation the King (notwithstanding diverse avouching the contrary) did accept. After much adoe Perkin taken, confessed under his owne hand-writing the course of all his proceedings, whereof so much as concerneth Ireland, <sup>i</sup> I have heere borrowed out of Halles Chronicles.

I being borne in Flaunders, in the towne of Turney, put my selfe in service with a Britton, called Pregent Meno, the which brought me with him into Ireland, and when wee were there arrived in the towne of Corke, they of the towne (because I was arrayed with some cloathes of silke of my said Masters) threeped upon me, that I should be the Duke of Clarences sonne, that was before time at Divelin, and forasmuch as I denyed it, there was brought unto me the Holy Evangelists and the Crosse, by the Major of the towne, called John Lewellin, and there I tooke my oath that I was not the said Dukes sonne, nor none of his blood. After this came to me an English man whose name was Stephen Poytowe, vwith one John VValter, and sware to me, that they knevv well that I vvas King Richards Bastard sonne, to whom I answered vwith like oathes that I vvas not: And then they advised me not to be affraide, but that I should take it upon me boldly: And if I vwould so doe, they vwould assist me with all their povver, against the King of England, and not onely they, but they vvere assured that the Earles of Desmond and Kildare, should doe the same, for they passed not vwhat part they tooke, so they might be avenged upon the King of England. And so against my will they made me to learne English, and taught me what I should doe and say: and after this, they called me Richard Duke of Yorke, second sonne to Edward the fourth, because King Richards Bastard sonne was in the hands of the King of England: And upon this, the said John VValter, and Stephen Poytowe, John Tyler, Hubbert Burgh, with many others, as the foresaid Earles, entred into this false quarrell, and within short time after the French King sent ambassadours into Ireland, whose names were Lyot, Lucas, and Stephen Frayn, and thence I went into Fraunce, and from thence into Flanders, and from Flanders againe into Ireland, and from Ireland into Scotland, and so into England.

Thus was Perkins<sup>k</sup> bragge twighted, from a milpost to a pudding pricke, and hanged was he the next yeare after.

Then in the yeare 1501. King Henry made Lieutenant of Ireland, his second sonne Henry as then Duke of Yorke, who afterwards raigned. To him was appointed Deputy, the aforesaid Gerald Earle of Kildare,<sup>1</sup> who accompanied with John Blacke Major of Divelin, warred upon William de Burgo, O-Brien, and Mac Nemarra, Ocarroll, and the greatest power of Irish men, that had beene seene together since the conquest, under the hill of Knoctoe, in English the hill of Axes, sixe miles from Galway, and two miles from Ballinclare, de Burgoes mannor towne. Mac William and his Complices were there taken, his Soldiours that escaped the sword were pursued, flying five miles, great slaughter done, and many Captaines gotten, not one English man killed. The Earle at his returne was created knight of the Noble Order, and flourished all his life long, of whom I shall bee occasioned to say somewhat in the next Chapter.

CAP. IX.

Henry the eight.

GERALD FITZ GERALD<sup>m</sup> Earle of Kildare a mighty made man, full of honour and courage, who had beene Lord Deputy and Lord Iustice of Ireland thirtie foure yeares, deceased the third of September, and lyeth buried in Christ's Church in Divelin. Betweene him and James Butler Earle of Ormond, their owne jealousies fed with envy and ambition, kindled with certaine lewd factions, abbettors of either side: ever since the ninth yeare of Henry the seventh, when James of Ormond with a great army of Irish men, camping in S. Thomas Court at Divelin,<sup>n</sup> seemed to face the countenance and power of the Deputy: these occasions I say fostered a mallice betwixt them and their posterityes, many yeares after incurable, causes of much ruffle and unquietnes in the Realme, untill the confusione of the one house, and nonage of the other, discontinued their quarrels, which except their Inheritours have the grace to put up, and to love unfainedly, as

Gerald and Thomas doe now, may hap to turne their countryes to little good, and themselves to lesse.

Ormond was nothing inferiour to the other in stomacke, and in reach of pollicy farre beyond him; Kildare was in governement a milde man, to his enemies intractable, to the Irish such a scourge, that rather for despite of him then for favour of any part, they relied upon the Butlers, came in under his protection, served at his call, performed by starts, as their manner is, the duty of good subjects.

Ormond was secret and drifty, of much moderation in speech, dangerous of every little wrinkle that touched his reputation. Kildare was open and passionate, in his moode desperate, both of word and deede, of the English welbeloved, a good Iusticier, a warriour incomparable, towards the Nobles that he favoured not somewhat headlong and unrulie, being charged before Henry the seventh, for burning the Church at Cashell, and many witnesses prepared to avouch against him, the truth of that article, he suddainly confessed the fact, to the great wondering and detestation of the Councell, when it was looked how he would justifie the matter, By Iesus (quoth he) I would never have done it, had it not beene told me that the Archbishop was within. And because the Archbishop was one of his busiest accusers there present, merrily laught the King at the plainenesse of the man, to see him alleadge that intent for excuse, which most of all did aggravate his fault. The last article against him they conceived in these tearmes, finally all Ireland cannot rule this Earle: No (quoth the King) then in good faith shall this Earle rule all Ireland. Thus was the accusation turned to a jest, the Earle returned Lord Deputy, shortly after created Knight of the Garter and so died. Marvell not if this successe were a corrosive to the adverse party, which the longer it held aloofe and bit the bridle, the more eagerly it followed his course, having once the sway and roome at will, as you may perceive hereafter.

Gerald Fitz Gerald sonne of the aforesaid Earle of Kildare, and Lord Deputy, who chased the nation of the Tooles, battered Ocarrolls Castles, awed all the Irish of the land more & more. A Gentleman valiant and well spoken, yet in his latter time overtaken with vehement suspition of sundry Treasons. He of good meaning to unite the families, matched his Sister Margaret Fitz Gerald, with Pierce Butler Earle of Os-sory, whom he also holpe to recover the Earledome of Ormond, whereinto after the decease of James, a Bas-tard brother had intruded.

Seven yeares together Kildare kept in credit and authority, notwithstanding the pushes given against him by secret heavers, enviers of his fortune, and nou-rishers of the old grudge, who sett him up to the Court of England by commission, and caused him there to be opposed with diverse interrogatories, touching the Earle of Desmond his Cousin, a notorious traytor, as they said. He left in his roome Morice Fitz Thomas Lord Justice. After whom came over Lord Lieutenant, Thomas Howard Earle of Surrey, Grandfather to this Duke of Norfolke, accompanied with 200. of the Kings guarde. While he sate at Dinner in the Castle of Divelin, hee heard newes that Oneale with a mighty army was even in the mouth of the borders, ready to invade: Immediately men were levyed by the Major, and the next morrow joyning them to his band, the Lieutenant marched as farre as the water of Slune, where having intelligence of Oneales recoyle, hee dismissed the footemen, and pursued Omore with his horse-men, which Omore was said to lurke within certaine miles. That espied a Gunner of Omore, and watching by a wood side discharged his peece at the very face of the Deputy, strake the visard of hishelmet, and pierced no further (as God would.) This did he in manner recklesse what became of himselfe, so he might amaze them for a time, breake the swiftnesse of their following, and advantage the flight of his Captaine, which thing he wanne with the price of his owne blood, for the Souldiours would no further, till they had searched all the corners of that wood, verily suspecting some ambush thereabout, and in severall knots ferretted out this Gunner, whom Fitz VVilliams and Bedlowe of the Roche were faine to mangle and hewe in peeces; because the wretch would never yeeld.

In the meane while defiance proclaimed with Fraunce & Scotland both at once, moved the King to returne Surrey <sup>q</sup> out of Ireland, that he might employ him in those services, his prowesse, integrity, good nature and course of governement, the country much commendeth, and honoureth the name and family to this day.

Pierce Butler <sup>r</sup> Earle of Ossory Lord Deputy, Kildare attending the Kings pleasure for his dispatch, recovered favour at the instance of the Duke of Suffolke whose daughter, Dame Elizabeth Graye he espoused royally, and so departed home. Now there was a great partaker of all the Deputies Councell, one Robert Talbot of Belgard whom the Geraldines hated deadly, him they surmized to keepe a Kalender of all their doings and to stirre the coales that incensed brother against brother. In which fury, James Fitz Gerald meeting the said Gentleman besides Ballimore, slew him even there, journeying to keepe his Christmasse with the Deputy. With this despitefull murder both sides brake out into open rage, and especially the Countesse of Ossory, Kildares sister, a rare woman, and able for wisedome to rule a Realme, had not her stomacke over-rul'd her selfe. Heere beganne intimation of new Treasons passing to and fro, with complaints and replyes. But Suffolke had wrought the canvas so fast in his sonne in lawes behalfe, that hee was suffered to rest at home, and onely Commissioners directed thither with Authority to examine the roote of their griefes, wherein if they found Kildare but even tollerably purged, their instructions was to depose the plaintiffe, and to sweare the other Lord Deputy. The Commissioners were, Sir Raphe Egerton, a Cheshire Knight, Anthony Fitzherbert, second Justice of the Common-pleas, and James Denton, Deane of Lichfield, who huddled up those accusations as they thought good, and suddenly tooke the sword from the Earle of Ossory, sware the Geraldine Lord Deputy, before whom Con Oneale bare the sword that day. Concerning the murtherer whom they might have hanged, they brought him prisoner into England, presented him to Cardinall WWolsey, who vvas said to hate Kildares bloud: And the Cardinall intending his execution vwith more dishonour to the name, caused him to be ledde about London streetes manacled and haltered, vwhich asked so long time, that the Deane of Lichfield stepped to the King, and got the Gentleman his pardon.

This untimely shift inflamed the Cardinall, and ripened the malice hitherto not so ranke, and therefore hereafter Ossory brought evident proofes of the Deputies disorder, that hee vwillfully vinked at the Earle of Desmond, vvhom hee should have attached by the Kings letters, that he curryed acquaintance and friendship vwith meere Irish enemyes, that he had armed them against him being the Kings Deputy, that he hanged and hevved rashly good subiects, vvhom hee mistrusted to leane to the Butlers friendship. Yet againe therefore was Kildare commanded to appeare, which he did, leaving in his roome Fitz Gerald of Leixlip,<sup>s</sup> whom they shortly deprived, and chose the Baron of Delvin, whom O'Connor tooke prisoner, and there the Earle of Ossory to shew his ability of service, brought to Divelin an army of Irish-men, having Captaines over them Oconnor, Omore and O-Carroll, and at S. Mary Abbey, was chosen Deputie by the Kings Councell.

In which office (being himselfe, save onely in feates of Armes, a simple gentleman) he bare out his honour, and the charge of governement, very worthily, through the singular wisedome of his Countesse, a Lady of such port, that all Estates of the Realme couched unto her, so politique, that nothing was thought substantially debated without her advice, manlike and tall of stature, very rich and bountifull, a bitter enemy, the onely meane at those dayes whereby her Husbands Countrey was reclaymed from the sluttish and uncleane Irish custome to the English habite, bedding, house-keeping, and civility.

But to those vertues vvas yoked such a selfe-liking, and such a Majesty above the tenure of a subiect, that for insurance thereof shee sticked not to abuse her husbands honour against her brothers follye. Notwithstanding I learne not that shee practised his un-doing, (vvhich ensued, and vvas to her undoubtedly, great heavinessse, as upon vvhom both the blemish thereof, and the sustenance of that vvhole family depended after,) but that shee by indirect meanes vvrought her Brother out of credite to advance her husband, the common voyce, and the thing it selfe speaketh.

All this vvhile abode the Earle of Kildare at the Court, and vwith much adoe found shift to be called before the Lords, to ansvvere solemnly. They sate upon him diversely affectioned, and especially the Cardinall, Lord Chauncellour, disliked his cause, comforted his accusers, and enforced the Articles objected, and vwhat else soever could be gathered thereof in these words.

I wot well, my Lord, that I am not the meetest man at this Board to charge you with these treasons, because it hath pleased some of your pew-fellowes to report, that I am a professed enemie to all Nobilitie, and namely to the Geraldines, but seeing every curst boy can say asmuch when he is controled, and seeing these points are so vveightie, that they should not be dissembled of us, and so apparent, that they cannot be denied of you. I must have leave, notwithstanding your stale slaughter, to be the mouth of these honorable persons at this time, and to trumpe your Treasons in your way, howsoever you take me.

First, you remember how the lewde Earle your kinsman, who passeth not whom he serve, might he change his Master, sent his confederates with letters of credence to Frauncis the French King, and having but cold comfort there, to Charles the Emperour, preferring the helpe of Mounster and Connaght towards the conquest of Ireland, if either of them vwould helpe to yvine it from our King. Hovv many letters? vwhat precepts? what messages? what threats have been sent you to apprehend him? and yet not done: vwhy so? forsooth I could not catch him: Nay nay, Earle, forsooth you vwould not nighly vwatch him. If he be justly suspected, vwhy are you partiall in so great a charge? If not, vwhy are you fearefull to have him tryed? Yea Sir, it vvil be svvorne & deposed to your face, that for feare of meeting him, you have vvinked, vvilfully shunned his sight, altered your course, vvarned his friends, stopped both eyes and eares against his detectors, and vwhen soever you tooke upon you to hunt him out, then vvas he sure before-hand to bee out of your vvalke: surely this juggling and false-play, little became either an honest man, called to such honour, or a Nobleman put in such trust. Had you lost but a Covv, or a Garron of your ovne, tvvo hundred Kyrneghes vwould have come at your vvhistle, to rescue the prey from the uttermost edge of Vlster: All the Irish in Ireland must have given you the vvay. But in pursuing so vveightie a matter as this, mercifull God, hovv nice, how dangerous, how wayward have you bin? One while he is from home, another while he keepeth home, sometimes fled, sometimes in the borders where you dare not venture: I wish, my Lord, there be shrewde bugges in the borders for the Earle of Kildare to feare: The Earle, nay, the King of Kildare, for when you are disposed, you reigne more like then rule the Land: where you are malicious, the truest subjects stand for Irish enemies; where you are pleased, the Irish enemie stands for a dutifull subject: hearts and hands, lives and lands are all at your courtesie, who fawneth not thereon, hee cannot rest within your smell, and your smell is so ranke, that you tracke them out at pleasure.

Whilst the Cardinall was speaking, the Earle chafed and changed colour, & sundry proffers made to answer every sentence as it came, at last he broke out, and interrupted them thus.

My Lord Chancellour, I beseech you pardon me I am short witted, and you I perceive intend a long tale. If you proceede in this order, halfe my purgation wil be lost for lacke of carriage: I have no schoole trickes, nor art of memory, except you heare me while I remember your words, your second processe vvill hammer out the former.

The Lords associate, vvho for the most part tenderly loved him, and knevv the Cardinals manner of termes so lothsome, as vvherevvith they vvere tyred many yeares agoe, humbly besought his grace to charge him directly vvith particulars, and to dvvell in some one matter, till it vvere examined through.

That granted.

It is good reason (quoth the Earle) that your Grace beare the mouth of this chamber. But my Lord, those mouthes that put this tale into your mouth, are very vvide mouths, such indeed as have gaped long for my vvreck, & now at length for vwant of better stuff, are fain to fill their mouths vwith smoak.
What my cousin Desmond hath compassed, as I knowv not, so I beshrevv his naked heart for holding out so long. If hee can bee taken by my agents that presently wayte for him, then have my adversaryes betrayed their malice, and this heape of haynous wordes shall resemble a man of strawe, that seemeth at a blush to carry some proportion, but when it is felt and poysed, discovereth a vanity, serving onely to fray crowes, and I trust your Honours will see the proofe hereof and mine innocencie testified in this behalf by the thing it selfe within these few dayes.
But goe to, suppose hee never bee had, what is Kildare to blame for it, more then my good brother of Ossory, notwithstanding his high promises, having also the Kings power, is glad to take egges for his money, and bring him in at leysure. Cannot the Earle of Desmond shift, but I must be of counsell? cannot hee bee hid, except I winke? If hee bee close, am I his mate? If he be friended, am I a Traytour? This is a doughty kinde of accusation, which they urge against mee, vwherein they are stabled and myred at my first denyall; You vwould not see him, say they, vwho made them so familiar vvith mine eye-sight? or vwhen vvas the Earle vwithin my Equinas? or vwho stood by vwhen I let him slip, or vwhere are the tokens of my vwillfull hood-vvinking? Oh, but you sent him vword to bevvare of you; Who vvas the messenger? vwhere are the letters? convince my negative: See how loosely this idle reason hangeth, Desmond is not taken, vwell, vve are in fault: vwhy? because you are: vwho proves it? no body. What conjectures? so it seemeth. To vvhom? to your enemies vwho tolde it them? What other ground? none. Will they svveare it? they vwill svveare it. My Lords, then belike they knowv it, if they knowv it, either they have my hand to shevv, or can bring forth the messenger, or vvere present at a conference, or privy to Desmond, or some body bevvrayed it to them, or themselves vvere my carryers or vice-gerents therein, vwhich of these parts vwill they choose, I knowv them too vwell to reckon my selfe convict by their bare vvords or headlesse heare-sayes, or frantick oathes, my letter vvere soone read, vvere any such vwriting extant, my servaunts and friends are ready to bee sifted. Of my cousin Desmond they may lye lewdly, since no man can heere well tell the contrary. Touching my selfe, I never noted in them either so much wit, or so much faith, that I could have gaged upon their silence the life of a good hound, much lesse mine owne, I doubt not may it please your Honours to oppose them, how they came to knowledge of these matters which they are so ready to depose, but you shall finde their tongues chayned to another mans trencher, and as it were, Knights of the Post, suborned to say, sweare and stare the uttermost they can, as those that passe not what they say, nor with what face they say it, so they say no truth. But of another thing it grieveth me, that your good grace, whom I take to bee wise and sharpe, and who of your owne blessed disposition wish me well, should bee so farre gone in crediting those corrupt informers, that abuse the ignorance of their state and countrey to my perill. Little knowv you my Lord, hovv necessary it is not onely for the governour, but also for every Nobleman in Ireland, to hamper his vincible neighbors at discretion, vwherein if they vwayted for processe of Law, and had not these lives and lands you speake of vwithin their reach, they might hap to loose their ovne lives and lands vwithout Law. You heare of a case as it vvere in a dreame, and feele not the smart that vexeth us. In England there is not a meane subject that dare extend his hand to fillip a Peere of the Realme. In Ireland, except the Lord have cunning to his strength, and strength to save his ovne, and sufficient authoritie to rackinge theeves and varletts vwhen they stirre, hee shall finde them svvarme so fast, that it vvill bee too late to call for Justice. If you vvill have our service take effect, you must not tye us alvvayes to the Iudicial proceedings, vwherevvith your Realme, thanked bee God, is inured.

As touching my Kingdome (my Lord) I vvould

you and I had exchanged Kingdomes but for one moneth, I vwould trust to gather up more crummes in that space, then tvvice the revenues of my poore Earledome ; but you are vvell and vvarme, and so hold you, and upbraide not me vvith such an odious storme. I sleepe on a cabbin, when you lye soft in your bed of downe, I serve under the cope of heaven, when you are served under a Canopy, I drinke water out of a skull, when you drinke out of golden Cuppes ; my courser is trained to the field, when your Iennet is taught to amble, vwhen you are begraced and belorded, and crowched and kneeled unto, then I finde small grace with our Irish borderers, except I cut them off by the knees.

At these girds the Councell would have smiled if they durst, but each man bitt his lippe, and held his countenance, for howsoever some of them inclined to the Butler, they all hated the Cardinall : A man undoubtedly borne to honour, I thinke some Princes Bastard, no Butchers sonne, exceeding wise, faire spoken, high minded, full of revenge, vicious of his body, lofty to his enemies, were they never so bigge, to those that accepted and sought his friendship wonderfull courteous, a ripe Schooleman, thrall to affections, brought a bed with flattery, insatiable to get, & more princelike in bestowing : as appeareth by his two Colledges at Ipswich, and at Oxenford, th' one suppressed with his fall, th' other unfinished and yet as it lieth an house of Students (considering all appurtenances) incomparable, through Christendome, whereof Henry the eight is now called Founder, because hee let it stand. He held and enjoyed at once the Bishopricks of Yorke, Durham, and Winchester, the dignities of Lord Cardinall, Legate, and Chancellour: the Abbey of S. Albans, diverse Prioryes, sundry fat Benefices in Commendam: A great preferrer of his servants, advauncer of learning, stoute in every quarrell, never happy till his overthrow. Therein he shewed such moderation, and ended so patiently, that the houre of his death did him more honour then all the pompe of life passed.

The Cardinall perceived that Kildare was no Babe, and rose in a fume from the Councell table, committed the Earle, deferred the matter till more direct probations came out of Ireland.

After many meetinges and objections wittily refelled, they pressed him sore with a trayterous errant, sent by his daughter the Lady of Slane, to all his brethren, to Oneale, Oconnor, and their adherents, wherein he exhorted them to warre upon the Earle of Ossory then Deputy, which they accomplished, making a wretched conspiracy against the English of Ireland, and many a bloody skirmish.

Of this Treason he was found guilty, and reprived in the Towre a long time, the Gentleman betooke himselfe to God and the King, was heartily loved of the Lieutenant, pittied in all the Court, and standing in so hard a case altered little his accustomed hue, comforted other noblemen, prisoners with him, dissembling his owne sorrow. One night when the Lieutenant and he, for disport were playing at slide-groat, suddainely commeth from the Cardinall a mandat to execute Kildare on the morrow. The Earle marking the Lieutenants deepe sigh, in reading the bill; By Saint Bride, quoth he, there is some mad game in that scrolle, but fall how it will, this throw is for a huddle; when the worst was told him, now I pray thee, quoth he, doe no more but learne assuredly from the Kings owne mouth, whether his Grace be witting thereto or not. Sore doubted the Lieutenant to displease the Cardinall, yet of very pure devotion to his friend, he posteth to the King at midnight, and said his errant, (for all houres of the day or night, the Lieutenant hath accesse to the Prince upon occasions.) King Henry controwling the sawcynesse of the Priest, those were his tearmes, gave him his Signet in token of countermand, which when the Cardinall had seene, he begun to break into unseasonable words with the Lieutenant, which he was loath to heare, and so he left him fretting: Thus broke up the storme for a time, and the next yeare <sup>t</sup> Volsey was cast out of favour, & within few yeares Sir William Skevington<sup>u</sup> sent over Deputy, who brought vwith him the Earle pardoned, and rid from all his troubles. Who vwould not thinke but these lessons should have schooled so vwise a man, and vvarned him rather by experience of adversities past, to cure old sores, then for joy of this present fortune, to minde seditious drifts to come. The second yeare of Skevingtons governement, there chaunced an uproare among the Merchants and their Apprentices, in Divelin, which hard and scant the Deputy and Major both, could appease. <sup>v</sup> Then was also great stirre about the Kings divorce, who hearing the frowardnes of Ireland under Skevington, and thinking it expedient in so fickle a world to have a sure poste there, made Kildare his Deputy, <sup>w</sup> the Primate of Ardmagh Lord Chancellor, and Sir James Butler Lord Treasurer. But Kildare reviving the old quarrels, fell to prosecute the Earle of Ossory, excited Oneale to invade his country, his brother John Fitz Gerald to spoyle the country of Vriell and Kilkenny, being himselfe at the doing of part, namely in robbing the towne, and killing the Kings subjects. The next yeare <sup>x</sup> going against O-Carrol he was pittifull hurt with a Gun in the thigh, so that he never after enjoyed his limmes, nor delivered his wordes in good plight, otherwise like enough to have beene longer forborne, in consideration of his many noble qualities, great good service, and the state of those times. Straight wayes complaints were addressed to the King of these enormities, & that in the most haynous manner could be devised, whereupon he was againe commuanded by sharpe letters to repaire into England, <sup>y</sup> & to leave such a substitute, for whose goverment he would undertake at his perill to answerē : He left his heire the Lord Thomas Fitz Gerald, and ere he went, furnished his owne pyles, forts, and castles, with the Kings artillery and munition, taken forth of Divelin. Being examined before the 'Councell, he staggered in his answer, either for conscience of the fact, or for the infirmity of his late mayme : Wherefore a false muttering flew abroad that his execution was intended. That rumour helped forward Skevingtons friends and servants, who sticked not to write into Ireland secret letters, that the Earle their Masters enemy (so they tooke him, because he got the governement over his head,) was cut shorter, and now they trusted to see their Master againe in his Lordship, whereafter they sore longed as crowes doe for carryon. Such a letter came to the hands of a simple Priest, no perfect English man, who for haste hurled it among other papers in the Chimneys end of his chamber, meaning to peruse it better at more leisure. The same very night a Gentleman retaining to Lord Thomas (then Lord Deputy under his father) tooke up his lodging, with the Priest, and raught in the morning for some paper to drawe on his straite hosen, and as the devill would he hit upon the letter, bare it away in the heele of his hose, no earthly thing misdeeming, at night againe he found the paper unfretted, and musing thereof began to pore on the writing, which notified the Earles death. To horsbacke got he in all haste, and spreading about the country these unthriftey tydings, Lord Thomas the Deputy rash and youthfull, immedately confedered himselfe with Oneale, and O-Connor, with his Vnkles and Fathers friends, namely, John, Oliver, Edward Fitz Gerald, James and John Delahide, Velch parson of Loughseudy, Burnel of Balgriffen, Rorcks a pirat of the seas, Bath of Dullardston, Field of Buske, with others, and their adherents guarded, he rideth on S. Barnabyes day to S. Mary Abbey where the Councell sate, and when they looked he should take his place, and rose to give it him, hee charged them to sit still, and stood before them and then spake.

Howsoever injuriously we be handled and forced to defend our selves in armes, when neither our service nor our good meaning towards our Princes crowne availeth, yet say not hereafter but in this open hostility, which wee professe heere and proclaime, we have shewed our selves no villaines nor churles, but warriours and Gentlemen. This Sword of estate is yours and not mine, I received it with an oath, and have used it to your benefit, I should offend mine honour, if I turned the same to your annoyance, now have I neede of mine owne sword, which I dare trust, as for this common sword, it flattereth me with a golden scabberd, but hath in it a pestilent edge, already bathed in the Geraldines blood, and whetted it selfe in hope of a destruction: save your selves from us, as from your open enemies. I am none of Henryes Deputy, I am his foe, I have more minde to conquere, then to governe, to meete him in the field, then to serve him in office, If all the hearts of England and Ireland that have cause thereto, vwould joyne in this quarrell (as I trust they will) then should he be a by-word (as I trust he shall) for his heresie, lechery, and tyranny, wherein the age to come may skore him among the auncient Princes, of most abhominable and hatefull memorie. With that he rendred up the sword, and flang away like a Bedlam, adding to his shamefull Oration many other slanderous and foule termes, which for regard of the Kings posteritie, I have no minde to utter.

They concluded, first to murther all of the English birth in Ireland, and sent an ambassador to Paulus the 3, called Mac Granell, archdeacon of Kelles, and rejected thence to Charles the fift, whose Aunt Queene Katherine the King had lately cast off, with much indignation of all the Spaniards, him hee thought eith to be kindled, and craved assistance to conquer the land, which he promised to hold under him, & his heires for ever. The meane while he forced an oath upon Gentlemen of every shire to ayde him, camped within the pale, reared a great army of English, Irish, and Scots, invaded the Earle of Ossory, and James his sonne Lord Butler, who having intelligence thereof, prevented his fury and kept those parts in order.

When the Butlers had stopped his rage in Mounster, he fell to parlyes and treatyes with them, sent them diverse messengers and letters, whereby he co-venanted to devide with them halfe the Kingdome, would they assist his enterprise, James Lord Treasurer, in whom for their youth and acquaintance he most affied, and often accumbred with such temptations, finally returned his brokers with letters.

Taking pen in hand to write you my resolute answere, I muse in the very first line, by what name to call you, my Lord, or my Cousin, seeing your notorious treason hath distayned your honour, and your desperate lewdnes shamed your kindred, you are so liberall in parting stakes with mee, that a man would weene you had no right to the game, so importunate in craving my company, as if you would perswade me to hang with you for good fellowship. And thinke you that James is so mad to gape for gudgens, or so ungratiouse to sell his truth for a peece of Ireland, were it so, (as it cannot be) that the Chickens you reckon were both hatched and feathered, yet be thou sure I had rather in this quarrell die thine enemy, then live thy partner: for the kindnes you proffer mee, and good love in the end of your letter, the best way I can I purpose to re-quite, that is, in advising you though you have fetched your feaze, yet to looke well ere you leape over. Ignorance and error, and a certaine opinion of duty hath carried you unawares to this folly, not yet so ranke, but it may be cured. The King is a vessell of bounty and mercy, your words against his Majesty shall not bee counted malicious, but rather balked out for heat and impotency, except your selfe by heaping offences, discover a mischievous and willfull meaning. Farewell.

Nettled with this round answere, forth he passed to increase his power, offered violence to very few, except that one despitous murther at Tartaine, the twenty five of July, where in a morning earely he caused to be brought before him, the honourable Prelate Doctour Allen, Archbishop of Divelin, and Lord Chancellor, who being a reverent personage, feeble for age and sicknesse, kneeling at his feete in his shirte and mantle, bequeathing his soule to God, his body to the Traytors mercy, the wretched young man commaunded there to be brained like an oxe. The place is ever since hedged in, overgrowne and unfrequented, in detestation of the fact. The people have observed that all the accessaries thereof, being after pardoned for rebellion, ended miserably. Allen had beene in service with Cardinall WWolsey, of deepe judgement; in the Cannon law, the onely match of Stephen Gardener another of WWolseyes Chaplaines, for avoyding of which emulation he was preferred in Ireland, rough and rigorous in iustice, hated of the Geraldines for his Masters sake, & his owne, as that he crossed them diverse times, and much troubled both the father and sonne in their governements, nor unlike to have promoted their accusations.

All this while the Kings army was looked for, and no succour came to the rebels, which greatly quayled them, being of themselves, though stored with souldiours, yet unfurnished with any sufficient munition to stand in a maine battell. Moreover the number of wise Gentlemen did not greatly incline to his purpose. And therefore when he besieged the City of Divelin, the most part of those arrowes which were shot over the walles, were unheaded, and little or nothing affrayed them. That espied the citizens, and gathering the faintnes of his souldiours thereby, blazed abroad upon the walles triumphant newes, that the King's Army was arryved, and as it had beene so indeed, suddenly rushed out of their gates upon the Rebels, who at the first sight of armed men, weening no lesse but the truth was so, otherwise assured that the Citty would never dare to encounter them, gave ground, forsooke their Captaines, dispersed and scattered into diverse corners, and never after met together.

A little before this time dyed the Earle of Kildare in the towre of London for thought and paine.<sup>z</sup> Sir William Skevington (whom the Irish men call the gunner, because hee was preferred from that office of the Kings Master-gunner to governe them, and that they can full evill brooke to be ruled of any that is but meanely borne) brought over an Army, and with him Leonard Gray, a younger sonne to the Marquesse

Dorset, Lord Marshall. To whom Fitz Gerald yeelded, and was sent into England, where hee with his Uncles, and other principalls of the conspiracy, were afterwards dravne, hanged and quartered at Tiburne. Soone after was the house of the Geraldines attaynted by Parliament, and all of the name busily trayned out for feare of new commotions. But Thomas Leurus, late Bishop of Kildare, schoole-master to a younger brother, Gerald Fitz Gerald, the Earle that now liveth, secretly stale avvay with the childe, first into Scotland, then into France, and misdoubting the French, into Italy, where Cardinall Pole his neere kinsman preserved him, till the raigne of Edward the sixt, with whom hee entred into high favour, and obtayned of him his olde inheritance of Meinothe.

Lastly, by meanes of the said Cardinall, and Sir Anthony Browne, Lord Mountague, whose sister hee marryed (a woman worthy of such a brother) Queene Mary (Founder and restorer of many noble houses) repealed his attainder, and set him in his fathers Earledome, wherein since that time he hath shewed himselfe sundry wayes officious and serviceable towards his Common-wealth, and the Crowne of England, beside other good qualities of honour and curtesie, they repute him heere for the best horseman in these parts of Christendome. With this escape of yong Fitz Gerald, the Lord Leonard Gray his Uncle on the mothers side was held suspect, & the same was one speciall article urged against him when hee lost his head, Anno. 1542.<sup>a</sup>

Sir William Skevington, a worthy Gouvernour, and among all vertues very just of his vword, deceased Lord Deputy at Kilmaynam, and the Lord Leonard Gray succeeded him.<sup>b</sup> Oneale and Odonill colourably required a parley vwith the Deput, but in the vway as they rode, they burned the Navan, and the tovvne of Ardee. Wherefore the Deputy vwith the helpe of the Maior of Divelin James Fitz Symonds, and the Maior of Droghedagh, and the English pale met them, flighted them, slevv 400. of their trayne, and there the Maior of Divelin for notable service in that journey, vvas knighted.

Sir Anthony Seintleger Knight of the Garter, Lord Deputy. He summoned a Parliament, vwherein the Geraldines vvere attainted, Abbeys suppressed, the King named supreme head and King of Ireland, because he recognized no longer to hold it of the Pope.<sup>c</sup> At this Parliament appeared Irish Lords Mac Gilpatricke, Lord Barry, Mac Cartimore, O-brene, and diverse more, vvhom followved Con Oneale, submitting himselfe to the Kings Deputy, and after to the King himselfe, vwho returned him richly plated, created him Earle of Tyrone, his base sonne Matthew Oneale Baron of Donganon. the onely sonne of his body mulier begotten, hee vvas then little esteemed and of no prooфе. The same time James Earle of Desmond came to the King, and vvas of him both Princely entertained and revvarded.

Edward the 6. Mary, and Elizabeth.

BEFORE the decease of Henry the 8. Seintleger was twice in England, leaving at both times Sir WWiliam Brabason Lord Iustice. In his second returne An. 1546. Sir Edward Bellingham, Captaine generall, landed at Waterford, and skowred the coast, where Omore and Ocomore used to prey.

This yeare<sup>d</sup> the city of Divelin obtained a Charter for two Sheriffes in stead of Bayliffes.

The Geraldines Out-lawes were taken and executed, Bellingham appointed Lord Deputye, erected a Mint within the Castle of Divelin, which quickly wearyed them for want of fuell. Andrew Brereton with 300. horsemen, and 40. footemen, inhabited the North as farre as Lecale, where hee with 35. horsemen gave the charge upon 240. Scotts, that from the out Islandes came to succour the Irish, and wasted the Countrey.

In one yeare hee cleared those quarters, that the Kings subiects might passe in peace.

Sir Frauncis Bryan the Kings Mynion was left Lord Justice, vwhile Bellingham repayred into England, vwhere he dyed a man made up by service in the vvarres, by continuall toyle therein diseased and feebled, but of courage a lyon to his dying day, true as steele, as farre from flattery as from hearing flatterers, an exceeding fervent Protestant, very zealous and carefull in tending the vwealth of Ireland, vwherein the countrey giveth him the praise over all his predecessours and successors vwithin memory, he spent his vwhole allovvance in hospitality, calling the same, his deare Masters meate, none of his ovne cost. Letters commendatory offered him by the Councell, vwhen Brian had vvrought his trouble before the Nobility of England hee rejected as vaine and superfluous, professing, that if of his owne innocencie he could not uphold him, hee would never seeke other shift, then Credo resurrectionem mortuorum, for (quoth he) well they may kill mee, but they shall never conquer mee. Sowre he was, and thundering in words, indeed very temperate, applyed himselfe altogether to severity, Lordlinnesse, and terrour, Brian dyed within sixe weekes, and Brabason became Lord Justice, till Saintleger the fourth time was sent over Deputye. To him crept Mac Cartye, that had lately roved and denied his obedience, with an halter about his necke, and got his pardon.

Vpon Saintleger came Sir James Croftes, of whose bounty and honourable dealing towards them, they yeeld at this day a generall good report. Croftes tarried in office two yeares, and left Sir Thomas Cusack (who dyed five houres before the writing heereof,) and Gerald Ailmer, while they both were coursing Oneale from Dundalke.

Queene Mary established in her Crowne, committed her government once more to Saintleger, whom sundry Noblemen pelted and lifted at, till they shouldered him quite out of all credite. He to be counted forward and plyable to the taste of King Edward the sixt his raigne, rymed against the Reall Presence for his pas-time, and let the papers fall where Courtiers might light thereon, vwho greatly magnified the pith and conveyance of that noble sonnet. But the originall of his own hand-vvriting, had the same firmly (though contrary to his ovne Iudgement) vvandering in so many hands, that his adversary caught it, and tripped it in his vway: the spot vvhereof he could never vvipe out. Thus vvas he removed, a discrete Gentleman, very studious of the State of Ireland, enriched, stout enough, vvithout gall.

While the Deputy staggered uncertaine of continuance, the Tooles, and the Cavenaghes vvaxed cockish in the Countie of Divelin, rangeing in flockes of seven or eight score, on vvhom set forth the Marshall and the Sheriffes of Divelin, Buckley and Gygen, vwith the citties helpe, and over-layde them in sudden skirmishes, of which, threescore were executed for example.

Thomas Earle of Sussex, Lord Deputy, with whom came his Brother in law Sir Henry Sidney, Treasurer.<sup>f</sup> This Deputy, to the inestimable benefite of the Realme, brought under obedience the disordered countreyes of Leix, Slewmare, Ofalie, Irrye, and Glinmalire, then late possessed by the Oconnores, Omores, Odempsyres, and other Irish rebels. Hee molested James Mac Conell the Scottish Islander, that in those dayes joyned with the Irish, and disquieted Ulster. In which voyage Divelin assisted the Governor with a faire company, conducted by John Vsher, Sheriffe, and Patrick Buckley. He held a Parliament, wherein it was made high Treason to retaine Scots for souldiours, and felony to contract with them matrimony. At his returne from England (in which time Sir Henry Sidney vvas Lord Iustice) hee pursued the Scots to their Islands, and there entred, did them much skathe, vvanne himselfe full great commendation of hardinesse, sayled backe vwith the glory of that adventure, vwherein (I trovv) tvvo more of his matches are not remembred, nor read. With the nevves of Maryes death, hee crossed the seas againe into England, leaving Sir Henry Sidney, Lord Iustice, and yet againe the next yeare leaving Sir William Fitzwilliams Lord Iustice, then returned he Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, by Proclamation reformed and abated their base Coyne, being as yet perfect in all the proportions, measures, allayes and values thereof, as by mintanor, tooke vwith him souldiours out of Divelin, victualled for sixe vveekes at that citties charge, under the leading of Petaboghe Sheriffe, and joyning him to his povver, vvent upon Shane Oneale, the Irish enemy of greatest force then living.<sup>h</sup> Thereupon Shane hyed him into England, the Lieutenant after him, Fitz VVilliams Lord Justice, till Sussex sped his businesse, and came backe the next and last time of his departure. Sir Nicholas Arnold directed thither vwith Commission, tarryed behinde him Lord Justice, and too short a vwhile as the country speaketh, vwho testifieth his upright and reasonable provision of household cates, the abuses whereof with sesse and souldiours, doe so impoverish and alienate the needie Farmers from us, that they say they might as easily beare the Irish oppressions of Coines & Cuddies, from which we pretend to deliver them.

Arnold for his better successe in government, linked himselfe entirely with Gerald Earle of Kildare, who likewise endeavoured to support the same with all diligence, being authorized to straine the rebels at his discretion, wherefore hee disposed himselfe to serve, and presented the Governour many times with a number of principall Out-lawes heades.

In the meane while Sussex became Lord President of the North of England, a spare man of body, but sound & healthfull, brought up with Stephen Gardiner, passing valiant, a deep reacher, very zealous in friendship, quicke in resolution of extremities in the field, wonderfull patient, able to tyre ten souldiours, learned and languaged, ever doing with his penne, of utterance sharpe and sententious, wary, busie, painefull, and speedie, meeter to rule, then to be over-ruled.

Sir Henry Sidney, Knight of the Garter, Lord President of Wales, and Lord Deputie of Ireland. Hee found the Realme distempered vwith Oneales rebellion, and the same did extinguish, vwhereof before I speake, I must looke backe a little into certaine yeares past, and lay together the circumstance of this lamentable tumult.

Of all the Irish Princes, though none vvas then comparable to Oneale for antiquity and noblenesse of bloud, yet had the same endured sundry varieties and vexations, untill the division began in England of the tvvo royall families, Yorke and Lancaster, at vwhich time the English Lords of Ireland, either for zeale, or for kinred and affection transporting their force thither to vphold a side, the meere Irish vaxed insolent, and chiefly Oneale incroched upon the full possession of Ulster, abiding so uncontrolled, till Shane Oneale fearing the puissance of Henry 8. exhibited to him a voluntary submission, surrendred all titles of honour, received at his hands the Earledome of Ter-ovven, commonly called Tirone, to be held of the King of English forme and tenure: Armes he gave the bloody hand a terrible cognizance. This Oneale had two sonnes, Matthew a bastard, and Shane legitimate, but because Matthew was a lusty horsemman, welbeloved, and a tryed Souldiour, Shane but a Boy, and not of much hope, the father obtained the Barony of Donganon, and the remainder of his Earledome to Matthew. When Shane and his foster brethren grew to yeares, they considered of the injury and tyranny, done by policie of the base Oneale, & with rearing hue and cry at the side of a Castle where he lay that night, when the Gentleman ran suddainely forth to answere the cry, as the custome is, they betrayed and murdereed him. The father not utterly discontent with his dispatch, when he saw the proofe of his lawfull sonne and heire, thenceforward fancied Shane Oneale, put him in trust with all, himselfe being but a Cripple, notwithstanding that Matthew left issue male which liveth, to whom the inheritance appertained, yet after his fathers decease, Shane was reputed for the rightfull Oneale, tooke it, kept it, challenged superiority over the Irish Lords of Ulster, warred also upon the English part, subdued Oreyly, imprisoned Odonil, his wife, and his sonne, enriched himselfe with all Odonils forts, castles, and plate, by way of ransome, detained pledges of obedience, the wife (whom he carnally abused) and the Childe, fortified a strong Iland in Tyrone, which he named spitefully, Foogh-ni-Gall, that is, the hate of English men, whom he so detested, that he hanged a Souldiour for eating English bisket, another by the feete mistrusted for a spy, another Captaine of the Galloglaghes he slew with torture. After this usurpation and tyranny, hee was yet perswaded by Melchior Husse sent unto him from Gerald Earle of Kildare, to reconcile himselfe to good order, and to remember the honourable estate wherein King Henry placed his father, which monition he accepted, besought his protection, and made a voyage into England, where the Courtiers noting his haughtines and barbarity, devised his stile thus. Oneale the great, Cousin to S. Patricke, friend to the Queene of England, enemy to all the world besides. Thence he sped home againe, gratiouly dealt with, used Civility, expelled the Scots out of all Vlster, where they intended a conquest, wounded and tooke prisoner, Captaine James Mac Conill their Chieftaine, whereof the said James deceased: ordered the North so properly, that if any subject could approve the losse of money or goods within his precinct, he would assuredly either force the robber to restitution, or of his owne cost redeeme the harme to the losers contention. Sitting at meate, before he put one morsell into his mouth, he used to slice a portion above the dayly almes, and send it namely to some begger at his gate, saying, it was meete to serve Christ first: But the Lords of Vlster, and elsewhere, whom he yoked and spoiled at pleasure, abhorring his pride and extortion, craved assistance of the Deputy, for redresse thereof: Oneale advertised, increaseth his rage, disturbeth and driveth out Mac Gwire, the plaintiffe, burneth the Metropolitane Church of Ardmagh; because no English army might lodge therein, for which sacrilege the Primate accursed him, besiegeth Dundalke, practiseth to call strangers into the land for ayde, as appeareth by those letters which Sir Henry Sidney Lord Deputy intercepted, occupieth all the North of Ireland, being 100. myles broad, 120. long. Then addressed he plausible letters to the Potentates of Munster, exhorting them to rebell, that the force of England at once might bee dismembred. This message the Deputy prevented, stayed the country, abridged him of that hope, and then proclaimed him Traytor. An Irish Iester standing by, and hearing Oneale denounced with addition of a new name, traytor: Except (quoth he) traytor be a more honourable title then Oneale, he shall never take it upon him, by my consent

While the Deputy was absent in England, the towne of Droghedagh was in hazard to be taken by the Rebels, which to preserve, at the motion of the Lady Sidney, then abiding in Droghedagh, came Master Sarsfield then Major of Divelin, with a chosen band of goodly young men Citizens, and brake the rage of the enemies.<sup>i</sup> The Deputy returning made him Knight, and finding it now high time utterly to weede and roote out the Traytor, he furnished a substantiall army, and with the readines thereof hartened the Irish, whom Oneale had impoverished, cut off his adherents, and all accesse of succour, chased him and his into corners, spent him, cast him into such despaire, that he consulted with his Secretary Neale Mac Connor, to present himselfe unknowne and disguised to the Deputy, with an halter about his necke, begging his pardon. Ere you doe so (quoth his Clarke) let us prove an extreame shift, and there he perswaded him to joyne with the Scots, whom he had lately banished: of whom, should he be refused or finde inconvenience, at any time, submission to the Deputy might then be used, when all faileth. Shane knew himselfe odious to the Scots, especially to them whom he thought to lincke with the brother and kin-dred of James Mac Conill, yet in those hard oddes hee devised rather to assay their friendship, then to grate upon mercy, which so oft and so intollerably he had abused.

Mac Conill whom Shane overthrew left two brethren, and a Sister, whereof one Suarly Torwy remained with Oneale, entertayned after his brothers death. The other was Alexander Oge, who with 600. Scots incamped now in Claneboy. The woman was Agnes Ilye, whose husband Shane slew in the said discomfiture, Agnes had a sonne Mac Gillye Aspucke, who betrayed Oneale to avenge his Fathers and Vncles quarrell. At the first meeting, (for thither he came accompanied with Torwy and his Secretary, and 50. horse-men) the Captaines made him great cheere, and fell to quaffing; but Aspucke minding to enter into his purpose, there openly challenged his Secretary, as the Author of a dishonourable report, that Mac Conils wife did offer to forsake her country and friends, and to marry with Shane Oneale her husbands destruction; Mary (quoth the Secretary) if thine Aunt were Queen of Scotland, it might beseeme her full well, to seeke such a marriage. To this brawle Oneale gave eare, upheld his man, advaunced his owne degree: The comparison bred a fray betweene their Souldiours; Out sprang Aspucke, and beat Oneales man, and then sudainely brought his band upon them in the tent, where the Souldiours with their slaughter-knives, killed the Secretary and Shane Oneale, mangled him cruelly, lapped him in an old Irish shirte, and tumbled him into a pit, within an old Chappell hard by: whose head foure dayes after, Captaine Pierce cut off and met therewith the Deputy, who sent it before him staked on a pole, to the Castle of Divelin, where it now standeth. It is thought that Tirlagh who now usurpeth the name of Oneale, practised this devise with Agnes, Alexander, and Torwy, when he perceived Shane discouraged, and not able to hold out.

Thus the wretched man ended, who might have lived like a Prince, had he not quenched the sparkes of grace that appeared in him, with arrogancy and contempt against his Prince.

The next Tumult in Ireland proceeded of the folly, especially of Sir Edmund Butler, Pierce and Edward his Brethren, who being unable in law, to maintaine his title to certaine landes, whereof he held possession, whereunto Sir Peter Carew laide very direct and manifest claime, (for Carew is an ancient Barons house in Ireland) confedered with James Fitz Morrice of the south, and others, began commotion, more dangerous to the Realme then the late stirre of Oneale, such was their opportunity of place, the rebels so friended, their number so furnished, that the Deputy passing forth against them in haste, requisite with such shift as the suddaine mischiefe asked, was thought to have put his person in great adventure, but in conclusion he wanne by that journey, great martiall honour, started them from hole to hole, and ransackt every veine of the land, so as the Butlers craving protection, shortly recoyled, and stand now at the Queenes mercy. To appease the country, & reforme the lewdnes of his Brethren, Thomas Earle of Ormond came from the Court of England home, and in quieting the said broyles, shewed also for his part, a right good peece of service, worthy to be remembred. After this ensued a Parliament, the particulars whereof, are expressed in the acts lately drawne, to be published in Print, somewhat before the last session, a seditious libell intituled, Tom Troth, (let fall in the streetes of Divelin) nipped by name di- verse honourable and worshipfull of the Realme, & certaine officers of the Deputyes houshold, for greeving the land with impositions of Cesse, whereupon followed a proclamation, bearing date the twenty-eight of Ia- nuary, which if it may bee executed in all points, would cut off many such murmures, and leave a blessed memory of the Governour that devised it. The day of prorogation<sup>k</sup> when the Knights and Burgesses of the Cominality resorted to the Lordes of the upper house, much good matter was there uttered betweene the Deputy and the Speaker, whereof comming home to my lodging I tooke notes, and here I will deliver them, as neere as I can call them to minde, in the same words and sentences, that I heard them. First the Speaker James Stanihurst an Esquire of worship, Recorder of Divelin, and for the Citty Burgesse at that present, began thus.

Rather of custome and dutyfull humility, then for doubt of your honourable disposition, (so well knowne to us all, and to every of us in private, that it little needeth my praise) we are to request your Lordship in the behalfe of our selves, and our countryes, whom we represent in this Parliament, to accept our service and endeavour in driving these conclusions, where by to the uttermost of our skill we have intended without injury, the Crowne to enrich, treasons to chastise, to better the state, traffique to further, learning to cherish, and in briefe, to maintaine with our best advice those benefits, which the Prince hath inferred upon this Realme by you, and you with your sword and wisedome have performed. An ordinary suite it is, in the end of such assemblies to crave executions of law, for it sufficeth not, to keepe a statute tanquam inclusum in tabulis, as a thing shut up in parchment rolles, but law must speake and walke abroad, to the comfort and behoofe of good subjects: Otherwise, vve shall resemble the folly of him, that once in every houre saluted his gold, never using it, but onely bad it lye still and couch. Of the necessity thereof, I cannot say so much as your Lordship conceiveth, and I desire not to discourse a matter generally felt and confessed. In particular the zeale which I have to the reformation of this Realme, and to breede in the rudest of our people, resolute English hearts, moveth me to pray your Lordships helping hand for the practice, namely of one statute which is for the erecting of Grammer Schooles, within every diocesse, the stipends to be levied in such proportion, as in the late act hath beene devised, whereunto the royall assent is already granted, and yet the point in no forwardnes, nor in none is like to be, except by some good meanes, the onset be given & freshly followed, surely might one generation sippe a little of this liquor, and so bee induced to long for more, both our countrymen that live obeysant, would ensue with a courage the fruites of peace, whereby good learning is supported, and our unquiet neighbours would finde such sweetnesse in the taste thereof, as it should bee a ready way to reclaim them. In mine experience, who have not yet seene much more then forty yeares, I am able to say that our Realme is at this day an halfe deale more civill then it was, since noble men and worshipfull, with others of ability, have used to send their sonnes into England to the Law, to Vniversities, or to Schooles. Now when the same Schooles shall bee brought home to their doores, that all that will may repaire unto them, I doubt not, considering the numbers brought up beyond the Seas, and the good already done in those few places, where learning is professed, but this addition discreetly made, will foster a young frye, likely to prove good members of this common wealth, and desirous to traine their children the same way. Neither were it a small helpe to the assurance of the Crowne of England, when Babes from their Craddles should be inured under learned Schoole-masters, with a pure English tongue, habite, fashion, discipline; and in time utterly forget the affinity of their unbroken borderers, who possibly might be wonne by this example, or at the least wise loose the opportunity, which nowv they have, to infect others: And seeing our hap is not yet, to plant an Vniversity here at home, which attempt can never bee remembred without many thankes to your good Lordship for your bountifull offer, me seemeth it is the more expedient to enter so farre forth as our commission reacheth and to hope for the rest: I have said enough, especially to a learned governour, to whom an inckling were sufficient in such a plausible and needfull motion. It resteth that wee pray your Lordship to folde up whatsoever squarings or diversities of Judgements, wise men have heere uttered in our often meetings, and by the sequele of all our doings to measure the good meaning of every severall person.

When the Speaker had done, the Deputy having a rich and plentifull kinde of utterance, meere naturall, but not without judgement, answered at length, as he that knew no end of his good, the points whereof, as I can remember, were these.

In good faith, M. Speaker, I cannot lesse doe, but recorde and testifie the readines, travaile and good service of you all, and namely of your selfe, who in the whole course of this Parliament, & now lastly in this charitable request for trayning your youth, have confirmed the opinion which my selfe and the generall voyce long since retained of your rare vertues, devotion, wisedome, learning, and modestie, so as the case cannot be misdoubted that is preferred by such a Proctor, the substance whereof toucheth you my Lords spirituall and temporall, & you the knights and worshipfull of every Shire, to you belongeth the quickening of this godly statute, which heere againe I recommend unto you, & will not let to enquire after your diligence therein from time to time, & the most effectuall order that may be for this purpose, shall assuredly be taken in place convenient. Shew your selves forvvard and franke in advancing the honour, wealth, ease and credit of your countryes, envy not to your posterity the same path that your selves have troden, and namely you that flourish at this day in the light & eye of your common-wealth. Had your opinions matched with mine, concerning the Vniversity which M. Speaker remembreth, no doubt the name and reputation thereof would have bin a spurre to these erections, as nurses

for babes to suck in, till they might repaire thither to be wained: But I trust your consents therein are only suspended for a time, and that so much good labour shall not be utterly lost and frustrate: What though certaine imperfections cannot as yet be salved? What though the summe arise not to make a muster of Colledges at the first day? What though the place be not also commodious? What though other circumstances inferre a feeble and rawe foundation? These are indeede objections of the multitude, whose backwardnesse breedeth an unnecessary stoppe in this our purpose. But your wisedomes can easily consider that time must ripen a weake beginning, that other Vniversities began with lesse, that all experience telleth us so, shall wee be so curious or so testy that nothing will please us, but all in all, all absolute, all excellent, all furnished, all beautified, all fortified in the prime and infancie thereof. I remember a tale of Apuleius asse, who being indifferently placed betweene two bottles of haye, because he could not reach them both at once, forbare them both. Let us not so doe, but content our selves by little and little to bee fedde as the case requireth. The rest of your Bills debated and passed by your wisedomes in this Parliament, I must confesse, they are as you say, beneficall to the Queene my Mistris, and to her Crowne, but how? Verily as the Husband-man soweth his seede, and reapeth much more then he layde downe, so whatsoeuer this benefite amounteth unto, it returneth to your selves in a circle, heere it groweth, heere it is eaten, heere it multiplyeth, heere it is spent, they have their due, the Prince is bettered, you are quieted, Iustice executed, malefactours terrifyed. Were they never so deare collopps of your owne flesh and bloud, I see not how you could either have coloured their offence, or qualifyed their punishment, the one so notorious, that it cannot be dissembled, the other so ordinary, that course of law prescribeth it. Therefore as you have well done, so you have done but your duties, allowed an inch to receive an ell, abridged your owne foes, avenged your own injuryes, condemned your owne oppressors. And yet this duty being on your parts, so cheerefully and painfully, so lovingly and advisedly performed, deserveth great thankes, and shall finde it too, If I bee the man, either in office able to consider you, or out of office in place to friend you. I am to depart into England shortly, lay your heads together, and article the points, whereby this Realme may be furthered, use mee either as a mouth to speake for you, or an eye to direct you, or as a hand to under-prop you, aut consilio, aut auxilio. Besides, the generall vwhich I ought to have for you all, as your governour, and yoked together under one obedience, English blouds, and English hearts, I am linked to you as to my continuall acquaintance these many yeares, hither I came in my spring, heere I have spent my summer, I returne in the fall of the leafe, now is the time, intimate your defects in demaunds, or what else soever may content you, and see whether I will tender your common-wealth. I meane not the pretended commonwealth, seditiously promoted in Tom Loodles ryme, but some good and substantiall matter worth the hearing, which upright and equall men will indeede esteeme. As for his complaint of Cesse and Imposition, it favoureth either hatefull malice, or childish folly, malice if he would decay the garrison that preserveth the Realme, folly if he thinke the Realme can be preserved vwithout a garrison, vherin I will shew you my fancie by the vway, perhaps out of all order, but I pray beare vwith mee, I take matters as they come next to hand, I can not skill of vwritten tales. Many a good-fellowv talkes of Robin Hoode, that never drevv in his Bovv, and many an idle head is full of Proclamations, and conceiveth certaine farre fetches, able in his vveening to vyield a Realme. But let me see vwhich of them all can justifie, that Ireland may spare the Army they kicke so much against. Are your enemyes more tractable then they have beene? Are they fevver? Are you by your selves of force to match them? If you bee, then vvere England starke madde, to disburse tvventie or thirtie thousand pounds a yeare, for none other purpose but to vexe and grieve you: that were like the husband who gelded himselfe to anger his wife. You must not thinke wee love you so evill, nay rather thinke truely wee tender your quietnesse and preservation, as a nation derived from our auncestours, ingraffed and incorporate into one body with us, disturbed with a sort of barbarous people, odious to God and man, that lappe your bloud as greedily as ours. The abuse of souldiours, their horse, boyes, and harlots, the Legerdemaine of Captaines, chequerelles, the purloyning of Cessors & Constables, the number of freedomes holding onely by concordatum, the annoyance and hurt which the poore farmer endureth, as I know them to be intollerable, so I know them to be redressed with the first detection, whose complaint hath not been heard? whose enormity vvinked at? what can you aske more? would you have souldiours nothing insolent, nothing sensuall, nothing greedy, no quarrellers? so wish I, but scarce hope for it, vvould you hazard a misery certaine, extreame, and incurable, to avoyde a trouble casuall, transitory, and remedilesse? so vvould not I, if you can prove a garrison needlesse, I undertake to ease you thereof, If you neede it, they must bee fedde, finde another vway then this, to provide for them victuall, that carryeth asmuch readinesse to service, and more contentation to your selves, and I assure you mine assistance to set it forvvard. But the Brokers of this libell are vvont to reason, Why should not vvee live vvithout an Army as vvell as in England? Why cannot our Noble-men of might in every border, our tenants and servaunts vvithstand the Irish next them, as vvell as the Northerne Lordes and Inhabitants of Riddesdale and Tiddesdale, and those about the Scottish banke resist the Scotts, facing and pilfering as fast as our enemyes. Very good, vwhat saye they then to Fraunce, vwhich is no

vvorser governed then England, and hath an Armye.
Italy notwithstanding as vvell ordered as Fraunce vvithout an Army? Spaine asvvell as either of them both, and continually keepes an Arme? I tell you, these are daungerous and hollovve kindes of Argumēnts, which are deduced ab exemplo, by example of other Realmes. Many subtile diversities, many varieties of circumstance, many exceptions alter the case, and make it utterly desperate. Touching Scotland it is well knowne, they were never the men whom England neede to feare: They are but a corner cut out, and easily tamed when they waxe outragious. Your foes lie in the bosome of your Countryes; more in number, richer of ground, desperate theeves, ever at an inch, unpossible to be severed from you without any fence, beside your owne valiantnes, and the helpe of our Souldiours. England is quiet within it selfe, thoroughly peopled on that side of Scotland, which most requireth it, guarded with an army, otherwise the Lords and Gentlemen, and lusty Yeoman, that dwell on a row are ready to maister their private vagaries. From all forraine invasions walled with the wide Ocean. Were there such a Sea betwixt you and the Irish, or were they shut up in an odde end of the land, or had they no such opportunityes of bogges and woods as they have, or were they Lords of the lesser part of Ireland, or were they severed into handfuls, not able to annoy whole townships and Baronies as they doe, the comparison were somewhat like, but alacke it fareth not so with you, you are beset round, your townes be feeble, the land empty, the commons bare, every county by it selfe cannot save it selfe. Take away the terroure and feare of our Bande, which increaseth your strength, many an Irish Lord would be set agog that now is full lovvly, and holdeth in his hornes, and the open enemy vwould scovvre your quarters that now dares not venture lest he pay for his passage. Consider me the effect of an Army vrought in these fevv yeares, for doubt vwhereof you are nothing so oft nor so lamentably pelted at, as your auncestors vvere, vwhich of them durst be stored with coyne, knovving the rebels teeth vvatered thereat, and himselfe not able to hold him out? vwhich of them had leisure to build, to lye soft and vvarme, to take his ease in his ovne home? vwhich of them vvere plated, or jevvelled, or attyred themselves, their vivves and children sumptuously, after their calling, as you doe now? If your bagges bee full vvhile theirs were lancke, if you dwell neatly where they dwelled homely, if you sleep on featherbeds where they slept on couches, if you be sumptuous where they vvere skant, you have the more cause to honour that Scepter, that so directeth you, and to love the warrant that procureth you this quietnes, the mother of all your wealth and prosperity.

Therefore to conclude where I began, weigh well the sick and wounded parts of your common wealth, cure the roote, regard the foundation, the principall pillars, the summer posts, the stone walles, as for the roofe and the tyles, if yee repaire them onely, and suffer the ground worke to perish, a tempest of weather, a flouve will shake your building. Of some such good and substanciall reformation I would advise you friendly to consult, and you shall finde me as willing to preferre the generall welfare of you all, as I have beene desirous to benefit every singular person of you, that hath in any lawfull suite attempted me.

¶ These last words gave Sidney to the Realme, as it were for a farewell, and thenceforwards looked for Sir William Fitz Williams his brother in law, a politike and stout gentleman, now Lord Justice, and for Sir John Perrot Lord president of Mounster, to be settled there, before his departure. He was honored at the point of his going, with such recourse, pompe, musicke, shewes & enterludes, as no man remembreth the like. He tooke ship towards England at the key of Divelin, in Lent followving,<sup>1</sup> accompanied to sea with the Estates & Worshipfull of Ireland, vwith innumerable harty prayers, & vwith that vvish of his returne, vwhereof but fevv Governours in these last 60. yeares, have held possession. The man vvas surely much loved of them, from his first office of Treasurer in the 2. yeare of Queen Mary, stately vwithout disdaine, familiar vwithout contempt, very continent & chast of body, no more then enough liberall, learned in many languages, & a great lover of learning perfect in blazoning of armes, skilfull of antiquities, of vvit fresh and lively, in consultations very Temperate, in utterance happy, vwhich his experience and vvisedome hath made artificiall, a preferrer of many, a father to his servants, both in warre and peace of commendable courage

ANNO 1285, the Lord Theobald Butler fled from Dublin, and died shortly after; and the Lord Theobald Verdon lost his men and horses, going towards Ophali, and the next morning, Girald Fiz Maurice was taken prisoner, and John Samforde was consecrated Archbishop of Dublin, and the Lord Jeffery Genuill fled, and Sir Gerard Doget, and Ralph Petit were slaine.

Anno 1287. deceased Richard Decetir, Girald Fitz Maurice, Thomas de Clare, Richard Taff, and Nicholas Telinge Knights.

Anno 1288. In England a bushell of Wheate was at foure pence. And Fryer Stephen Fulburne Lord Iustice of Ireland dyed. And John Samford Archbishop of Dublin was made Lord Iustice. And the Lord Richard Burgh, Earle of Ulster, besieged

Theobald Verdon in the Castle of Aloan, and came to Trymm with a great power by the working of Walter Lacy.

Anno 1290. Was the chase or discomfiture of Ophaly, and divers Englishmen were slaine. And Mac Coghlan slue Omolaghlin. And William Bourgh was discomfited at Delvin by Mac Coghlan. And Gilbert Earle of Gloucester, married the daughter of King John le Bayloll, King of Scotland. And Sir William Vescy was made Justice of Ireland:

Anno 1294. Deceased John de Samford, Archbishop of Dublin, and John Fitz Thomas, and John de la Mare took prisoners, Richard Bourgh Earle of Ulster, and William Bourgh in Meath. And the Castle of Kildare was taken, and by the English and Irish, the whole countrie was wasted. And Calwagh burnt all the rolles and tallyes of that countie. And Richard was delivered out of the Castle of Leye for his two sonnes. And John Fitz Thomas with a great armie, came into Meath.

Anno 1295. William Dodinsell Lord Justice of Ireland dyed, and the Lord Thomas Fitz Maurice was made Lord Justice.

Anno 1296. Fryer William de Hothum was consecrated Archbishop of Dublin.

Anno 1298. The Lord Thomas Fitz Maurice dyed, and an agreement was made betwixt the Earle of Ulster, and the Lord John Fitz Thomas: and Sir John Wogan was made Lord Justice of Ireland.

Anno 1299. William, Archbishop of Dublin dyed: and Richard de Feringes was consecrated Archbishop of Dublin.

Anno 1302. The King of England (Edward the first) went into Scotland, and there Sir John Wogan, Lord Justice of Ireland, and the Lord John Fitz Thomas with many others met with him.

Anno 1321. There was a very great slaughter made of the Oeonhurs at Balibagan, by the English of Leinster and Meath. And the said Earle of Lowth was made Lord Iustice.

Anno 1322. Died the Lord Richard Birmingham, Lord of Athenry, the Lord Edmund Butler, and the Lord Thomas Persivall. Moreover the Lord Andrew Birmingham, and Sir Richard de la Londe, were slaine by Onolan.

Anno 1323. John Darcy came over Lord Iustice of Ireland.

Anno 1325. Deceased Nicholas Fitz Simon Gonvill.

Anno 1326. The Lord Richard Burgh Earle of Ulster died: Edward the third, sonne to Edward the second, after the Conquest, at the age of fifteene yeeres, in his fathers life time; upon Candlemas day was crowned King at Westminster. In the beginning of whose raigne there was great likelyhood of good successe to follow: For then also the Earth received fruitfulness, the Ayre temperature and, Sea calmenesse.

Anno 1327. Donald sonne to Art, Mac Murch, and Sir Henry Traharne were taken prisoners.

Anno 1328. Deceased the Lord Thomas Fitz John Earle of Kildare, and the Lord Arnold Power, and William Earle of Ulster came into Ireland.

Anno 1329. John Brimingham Earle of Lowth, and Peter his brother with many other, were slaine on Whitsun, even at Balibragan by the men of the Country: Also the Lord Thomas Butler, and divers other Noble men were slaine by Macgohegan and other Irishmen, neere Molingar.

Anno 1330. There died Sir Richard Deicetir: Also the Earle of Ulster went with a great Army into Munster upon Obren: Also the Prior of the Hospitall, then Lord Justice, put the Lord Maurice Fitz Thomas Earle of Desmond, into the custody of the Marshall, out of the which hee freely escaped. And Sir Hugh de Lacy returned into Ireland, and obteined peace of the King.

Anno 1331. The Earle of Ulster went into England, and great slaughter was made upon the Irish in Okenslie; also the Castle of Arclow was taken by the Irish, and great slaughter made of the English in the Cowlagh by Otohell, where Sir Philip Bryt and many others were slaine; and the Lord Anthony Lacy came over Lord Justice of Ireland, and great slaughter was made of the Irish at Thurles, by the men of the Country, and at Finnath in Meath; there were many of them slaine by the English: also the Castle of Fernis was taken and burned by the Irish: also Maurice Fitz Thomas Earle of Desmond was apprehended at Limerick by the Lord Justice, upon the day of the Assumption, and sent unto the Castle of Dublin. Moreover, the Lord Justice tooke Sir William Birmingham and Walter his sonne at Clomell by a wile, whilst hee was sick in his bed, and sent them likewise unto the Castle of Dublin on the 19. day of Aprill.

Anno 1332. Sir William Birmingham was hanged at Dublin, but Walter his sonne was delivered, by reason hee was within orders. Also the Castle of Clonmore was taken by the English, and the Castle of Bonrath was destroyed by the Irish of Thomond : also Henry Mandevill was sent prisoner to Dublin ; likewise Walter Burgh with two of his brethren were taken in Conaught, by the Earle of Ulster, and sent to the Castle of Norburgh : also the said Lord Justice was deposed by the King, and went into England with his wife and children ; and John Darcy was made Lord Justice, and great slaughter was made upon Bren Obren and Mac Carthy in Munster, by the English of that Country.

Anno 1385. Dublin Bridge fell.

Anno 1387. about Martilmas, the Peeres of England rose against those that were of the side of Richard the second: but Robert Veer, Duke of Ireland, came over to Chester, and got together many men, and put them in array to march backe toward the King: whom the said Peeres met at Rotcotebridge, and slue Thomas Molleners, and spoyled the rest: nevertheless, the Duke of Ireland escaped. But in the same yeere on the morrow after Candlemas day, a Parliament beganne at London: in which were adjudged the Archbishop of Yorke, the Duke of Ireland, the Earle of Suffolke, &c.

Anno 1388. foure Lord Iustices of England, were banished into Ireland; by a decree of the Parliament: and it was not lawfull for them either to makes lawes, or to give counsell, upon paine of the sentence of death.

Anno 1390. Robert de Wikeford Archbishop of Dublin, departed this life, and the same yeere was Robert Waldebie translated unto the Archbischopricke of Dublin, being an Augustine Fryer.

Anno 1394. and in the seaventeenth yeere of King Richard the second, died Anne, Queene of England: and the same yeere about Michaelmas, the King crossed the seas over into Ireland, and landed at Waterford the second day of the moneth of October, and went back about Shrovetide.

Anno 1397. Fryer Richard de Northalis, of the order of the Carmelites, was translated to the Archbischopricke of Dublin and died the same yeere. Also the same yeere, Thomas de Craulie, was consecrated Archbishop of Dublin. And Sir Thomas Burgh, and Sir Walter Birmingham slue sixe hundred Irish men with their Captaine Macdowne. Moreover, Edmund Earle of March, Lord lievetenant of Ireland, with the aide of the Earle of Ormond, wasted Obren's country, and at the winning of his chiefe house, hee made seaven Knights, to wit, Sir Christopher Preston, Sir John Bedlow, Sir Edmund Loundres, Sir John Loundres, Sir William Nugent, Walter de la Hide, and Robert Cadell.

Anno 1398. and in the two and twentieth of King Richard the second, on Ascension day, the Tothillis slue forty English men. Among whom these were accounted as principall, John Fitz Williams, Thomas Talbot, and Thomas Comyn. The same yeere upon Saint Margarets day, Edmund, Earle of March, the Kings lievetenant, was slaine, with divers other by Obren, and other Irishmen of Leinster, at Kenlis in Leinster. Then was Roger Greye elected Lord Justice of Ireland. The same yeere on the feast day of Saint Marke, the Pope and Confessor came to Dublin, the noble Duke of Surrey, the Kings lievetenant in Ireland, and with him came Thomas Crauly, Archbishop of Dublin.

Anno 1399. and of King Richard the three and twentieth, on Sunday being the morrow after Saint Petronilla the Virgins day, the illustrious King Richard landed at Waterford with two hundred shippes: and the Friday after, at Ford in Kenlis, in the Countie of Kildare, there were slaine, two hundred Irish men by Ienicho and other English men, and the morrow after, the Citizens of Dublin brake into Obrens country, slue three and thirty of the Irish, and tooke fourescore men, women, and children. The same yeere King Richard came to Dublin upon the fourth Kalends of July, where hee was advertized of the coming of Henry, Duke of Lancaster into England; whereupon he also speedily went over into England:

and a little while after, the same King was taken prisoner by the said Henry, and brought to London, and there a Parliament was holden the Morrow after Michaelmas day, in which King Richard was deposed from his kingdome, and the said Henry, Duke of Lancaster, was crowned King of England, on the feast day of Saint Edward the Confessor.

Anno 1400. and in the first yeere of the raigne of King Henry the fourth, at Whitsontide, the Constable of Dublin Castle, and divers others at Stranford in Ulster, fought at Sea with the Scots, where many Englishmen were slaine and drowned. The same yeere on the feast of the Assumption of the blessed Virgin Mary, King Henry, with a great army, entred Scotland, and there he was advertized that Owen Glendor, with the Welsh men, had taken armes against him: for which cause he hastened his iourney into Wales.

Anno 1401. in the second yeere of King Henry the fourth, Sir John Stanley the kings Lievetenant, in the moneth of May, went over into England, leaving in his roome Sir William Stanley. The same yeere on Bartholomew Eeven, arrived in Ireland, Stephen Scroope, Lievetenant unto the Lord Thomas of Lancaster, the kings Lievetenant of Ireland. The same yeere on Saint Brices day, the Lord Thomas of Lancaster, the kings Sonne, and Lord Lievetenant of Ireland, arrived at Dublin.

Anno 1402. on the fift Ides of July, was the dedication of the Church of the Fryers Preachers in Dublin, by the Archbishop of Dublin. And the same day the Maior of Dublin, namely, John Drake, with the citizens and townesmen, neere to Bre, slue of the Irish, foure hundred ninety three, being all men of warre. The same yeere in September a Parliament was held at Dublin; during the which, in Vrgile, Sir Bartholomew Verdon, knight, James White, Stephen Gernond, and their complies, slue John Dowdall Sheriffe of Lowth.

Anno 1403. in the fourth yeere of King Henry, in the moneth of May, Sir Valter Betterley, Steward of Ulster, a right valiant knight, was slaine, and to the number of thirty other with him. The same yeere on Saint Maudlins Eeven, neere unto Shrewesbury, a battell was fought betweene king Henry, and Henry Percy, and Thomas Percy then Earle of Worcester; which Percyes were slaine, and on both sides there were sixe thousand and more slaine in the battaile. The same yeere about Martlemas, the Lord Thomas of Lancaster, the kings Sonne, went over into England, leaving Stephen Scroope his Deputy there: who also in the beginning of Lent, sayled over into England, and then the Lords of the land chose the Earle of Ormond to be Lord Justice of Ireland.

Anno 1404. in the fift yeere of king Henry, John Colton, Archbishop of Armagh, departed this life upon the fift of May, unto whom Nicholas Flemming succeeded. The same yeere on the day of Saint Vitall the Martyr, the Parliament began at Dublin, before the Earle of Ormond, then Lord Justice of Ireland, where the Statutes of Kilkenny and Dublin were confirmed, and likewise the Charter of Ireland. The same yeere Patricke Savage was treacherously slaine in Ulster, by Mac Kilmori, and his brother Richard was given for a pledge, who was murthered in the prison, after hee had paid two thousand markes. The same yeere upon Martilmas day, deceased Nicholas Houth, Lord of Houth, a man of singular honesty.

Anno 1405. in the sixth yeere of King Henry, in the moneth of May, three Scottish Barkes were taken, two at Greenecastle, and one at Dalkay, with Captaine Thomas Macgolagh. The same yeere the Merchants of Droghedah entred Scotland, and tooke pledges and preyes. The same yeere on the Eeven of the feast day of the seaven brethren, Oghgard was burnt by the Irish. The same yeere in the moneth of June, Stephen Scroope crossed the seas over into England, leaving the Earle of Ormond, Lord Justice of Ireland. The same yeere in the moneth of June, they of Dublin entred Scotland at Saint Ninian, and valiantly behaved themselves: and afterward they entred Wales, and there did much hurt to the Welch men, and brought away the shrine of Saint Cubius, and placed it in the Church of the holy Trinitie in Dublin. The same yeere on the Eeven of the feast of the blessed Virgin, James Butler, Earle of Ormond, dyed at Raligauran, (whose death was much lamented) whilst hee was Lord Iustice of Ireland, unto whom succeeded Girald, Earle of Kildare.

Anno 1406. in the seaventh yeere of King Henry, on Corpus Christi day, the citizens of Dublin, with the country people about them, manfully vanquished the Irish enemies, and slue divers of them, and tooke two Ensignes, bringing with them to Dublin, the heads of those whom they had slaine. The same yeere the Prior of Conall, in the Plaine of Kildare, fought valiantly, and vanquished two hundred of the Irish that were well armed, slaying some of them, and chasing others; and the Pryor had not with him, but twenty Englishmen: and thus God assisteth those that put their trust in him. The same yeere after Michaelmas, came into Ireland, Scroope, Deputie Iustice to the Lord Thomas of Lancaster, the Kings Sonne, Lord Lievetenant of Ireland. The same yeere dyed Innocent the seaventh, to whom succeeded Gregorie in the Popedome. The same yeere a Parliament was holden at Dublin, on the feast of Saint Hillary, which in Lent after was ended at Trym, and Meiler Bermingham slue Cathole O Conghir, in the end of Frebruary; and there dyed Sir Jeffery Vaulx, a Noble Knight in the Countie of Carlogh.

Anno 1407. a certaine most false fellow, an Irish man, named Mac Adam Mac Gilmori, that had caused forty Churches to be destroyed, who was never baptized, and therefore hee was called Corbi; tooke prisoner Patricke Savage, and received for his ransome, two thousand markes, and afterwards slue him, together with his Brother Richard.

The same yeere, in the feast of the exaltation of the holy Crosse, Stephen Scroope, Deputy to the Lord Thomas of Lancaster, the Kings Sonne, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, with the Earles of Ormond and Desmonde, and the Prior of Kilmainan and divers other Captaines, and men of warre of Meath, set from Dublin, and invaded the land of Mac Murch, where the Irish had the better part of the field for the former part of the day, but afterwards they were valiantly rescued by the said Captaines, so that Onolad with his sonne and divers others, were taken prisoners. But then and there being advertised that the Burkens and O keroll, in the County of Kilkenny, had for the space of two dayes together done mischiefe, they rode with all speed unto the Towne of Callan, and there encountring with the adversaries, manfully put them to flight, slue Okeroll and eight hundred others; and it was averred by many, that the Sunne stoodstill for a space that day, till the Englishmen had ridden 6. miles, which was much to be wondred at.

The same yeere, Stephen Scroope went over into England, and James Butler Earle of Ormond, was elected by the Country L. I. of Ireland.

place into the hands of the Lord Richard Talbot Archbishop of Dublin, who was afterward chosen to be Lord Justice of Ireland.

Anno 1420. about the fourth Ides of Aprill, James Butler, Earle of Ormond, Lord Lievetenant of Ireland, landed at Waterford, and shortly after he caused a combat to be fought betwixt two of his cousins: of whom one was slaine in the place, and the other was carried away sore wounded unto Kilkenny.

On Saint Georges day, the same Lord Lievetenant held a Councell at Dublin, and there summoned a Parliament, and after the midst thereof, he made great preyes upon O Rely Mac Mahon, Mac Gynoys. And the seventh of June, the Parliament began at Dublin, and there were granted to the Lord Lievetenant, seaven hundred markes. And that Parliament continued for sixteene dayes, and was adjourned againe to Dublin untill Munday after Saint Andrewes day. And in the said Parliament were reckoned up the debts of the Lord John Talbot, late Lord Lievetenant, which amounted to a great summe. Also on the morrow after Michaelmas day, Michael Bodley departed this life. Vpon Saint Francis Eeve, dyed Fryer Nicholas Talbot, Abbot of the Monastery of Saint Thomas the Martyr at Dublin, whom Fryer John Whiting succeeded. The morrow after the feast day of the Apostles Simon and Jude, the Castle of Colmolin was taken by Thomas Fitz Girald. And on Saint Katherines Eeven, Buttler, Sonne and heire unto the Earle of Ormond, was borne: and the Munday after Saint Andrewes day, the Parliament was begun at Dublin, and continued for thirteene dayes; and there were granted unto the Lord Lievetenant, three hundred markes, and then againe the Parliament was adjourned untill Munday after Saint Ambrose day. Then rumours were spread abroad, that the Lord Thomas Fitz John, Earle of Desmond, was departed this life at Paris, upon Saint Laurence day, and that he was buried in the Covent of the Fryers Preachers there, the King of England being there present. After whom succeeded his Vnkle James Fitz Girald, whom he had three severall times renounced, alledging that he was an unthrift, and had wasted his Patrimony both in Ireland and England, and that hee gave or would give lands unto the Monastery of Saint James of Keynisham.

Anno 1421. Our Lady day fell out to be upon Munday in Easter weeke. Also the Parliament began the third time at Dublin, the Munday after Saint Ambroses day; and there it was ordained that agents should be sent over unto the King for reformation of matters touching the state of the land; namely, the Archbishop of Armagh, and Sir Christopher Preston, Knight. At the same time Richard Ottidian, Bishop of Casshell, was accused of John Gese, Bishop of Lismore and Waterford, upon thirty articles: among other, one was, that he made very much of the Irish, and that he loved none of the English nation, and that he bestowed no Benefice upon any English man, and that he counselled other Bishops not to give the least Benefice to any of them: that he counterfeited the Kings Seale and letters Patents: that he went about to make himselfe King of Munster: and that hee had taken a Ring from the image of Saint Patricke, (which the Earle of Desmond had offered) and bestowed it upon his Concubine. And he exhibited many other enormous matters against him in writing, by whom the Lords and Commons were troubled. Also in the same Parliament, there arose a contention betwixt Adam Payn, Bishop of Clone, because the said Adam would have united unto his See, the Church of another Prelate, and the other would not give way unto it; and so they were dismissed unto the Court of Rome, & the Parliament continued eighteene dayes. Then newes were stirring, that the Lord Thomas of Lancaster, Duke of Clarence, was slaine in France, and many other with him. Vpon the seventh of May there was slaughter made upon the Earle of Ormonds, the Lord Lievetenants men, by Omordris, neere unto the Monastery of Leys, and there were seaven and twenty English men slaine: the chiefe whereof were Purcell and Grant, tenne Noble men were taken prisoners, and two hundred fled unto the said Abbey, and so saved themselves. About the Ides of May, dyed Sir John Bedloe, knight, and Jeffery Galon, sometime Maior of Dublin, who was buried in the house of the Fryers Preachers of the same City. About the same time, Mac Mahon an Irish Lord, did much hurt in Vrgile, by wasting and burning all before him Vpon the seaventh of Iune, the Lord Lievetenant entred into the Country, about Leys, upon Omordris, leading a very great army, and for the space of foure dayes together, slaying the people, till the Irish were glad to sue for peace. On the feast of Saint Michael the Arch-angell, Thomas Stanley, with all the Knights and Esquires of Meath and Irel, tooke Meyle O Donnell prisoner, and slue the rest, in the fourteenth yeere of the raigne of King Henry the sixt.
